NINETY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

The Amount to Be Saved to the Country by the Fees Bill.

The Globe, referring to Hon. G. W. Ross' bill to reduce fees, says: "He explained the clauses of the bill, showing that by it division court clerks should retain all the fees accruing from their office up to $1,000, proportions varying from 10 to 50 per cent of the excess being taken for the Provincial treasury. This, Mr. Ross explained, was a reduction from $1,500, the former exemption. Local registrars of the high court, clerks and deputy clerks of the crown, county court clerks and surrogate registrars should retain all their fees up to $1,500, a reduction from $2,000, the Provincial treasury absorbing the excess in proportions varying from 10 to 50 per cent. The fees of registrars were by the bill similarly reduced, $1,500 instead of $2,500 being the margin, and a similar scale of appropriation for municipal purposes of the excess being provided as for the high court officials, sheriffs, county crown attorneys and clerks of the peace are to be allowed to retain all their fees up to $2,000, a reduction from $3,000. Mr. Ross then gave some figures as to the saving which would be effected by this change. There were 28 registrars who would be affected by the bill, and the additional amount which would be received by the municipalities would be from $30,000 to $35,000. From sheriffs and other officers similarly treated there would be a saving of nearly $50,000, and from the division court clerks a saving of some $6,000 or $7,000, so that in all a very considerable saving would be effected."

Threw Away a Fortune.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 25.—About a month ago the crew of the fishing steamer Capatinea found a lump of white-looking substance while cruising about 100 miles from the coast. On their return to town the piece was examined by several experts who declared it was ambergris. As the lump weighed close on to 100 pounds its estimated value is $250,000. A party has now come up with a diver to search for the missing treasure.

Bloodshed!

The Coxe Movement Attended by Serious Consequences.

A Train-Stealing Contingent Over-taken by U. S. Marshals.

Shots Exchanged and Several Persons Injured—The United States Military Authorities Take Action.

BILLINGS, Montana, April 25.—The first bloodshed resulting from the clashes between the law and the industrial army movement was witnessed here to-day. About 11 o'clock this morning the announcement was made that the train-stealing contingent of the Coxe army was rushing into the city on a Northern Pacific train from the west at a high rate of speed, closely followed by a train load of United States deputy marshals. This was verified a few minutes before noon when the train of box cars ran into town.

The Coxeites were overtaken by a special train of marshals just as they entered the limits of the city. After their arrival the marshals' train overtook the Hogan contingent just as they were pulling away from Columbus, and attempted to arrest the progress of the train, but the leaders would not yield to the demands of the marshals, and instructed their men to go ahead. The two trains came on until this city was reached, when a stop was ordered, the conflict between the two bodies resulting.

SHOTS EXCHANGED.

As near as can be learned Marshal McDermott ordered the leaders of the captured train to surrender, and when they refused to do so a few of the marshals, before receiving command to do so, fired upon the crowd of industrialists. The shots were quickly returned. A number of shots were exchanged before Marshal McDermott could regain control of his men. During the firing one of the deputies was seriously wounded, and one of the men on the rear platform car was shot in the groin.

TOO MANY FOR THE MARSHALS.

McDermott decided that his men were not equal to the odds against them, and ordered his men to cease firing, which they did. The captured train soon after pulled out, and McDermott notified the authorities that his forces were inadequate to capture the 500 men, who were determined to retain possession of the train.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The village of Adams tells the scene of a horrible crime this morning, resulting in the death of Will C. Green and the probable fatal injury of the woman with whom he had lived for a number of years. The indications are that it was a case of murder and suicide, although the woman may recover. The woman was the daughter of a farmer in an adjoining town, and the families on both sides are respectable.

Ten thousand voices joined in the cheers that greeted the soul-stirring strains of "Dixie," which followed the opening salutes of cannon.
