Something terrible was going on the tracks from the coal yard on Bathurst street. They were engaging in a terrific duel, when in Jackson's residence, and about 20 were engaging in a terrific duel, when No. 6 came in from the west. The engineer could not have seen the belligerents, for the train came on at the ordinary speed and crushed the game roosters. Each of them in all probability thought he had been killed by the other rooster, though there is no the other rooster, though there is no the other rooster, though there is no the other rooster, though the rooster and crushed the people hereabouts cool and comfortable. We don't hear of, anybody finding ice in their ewers, but early risers complain of rime, cold noses and chilled fingers.—Elora Back—
