Dressed pork sold mostly at $11.25 per cwt, which is considerable of a drop from last week's figures. There were so few deliveries this morning, however, that it was almost imposssible to properly judge the week's prices. Butter Slumps.

Saturday's slump in the price of butter continued today. The first "grass" butter is expected in this week. The wholesalers are paying 24c to 25c for rolls and Eg prices are unchanged, with every prespect of them remaining so. The sup-Egg prices are unenanged, with every prospect of them remaining so. The supply is about at its height now, and there appears to be little danger of flooding the market. The wholesale dealers are Poultry is still very scarce, the dealers having practically none this morning.

TORONTO, May 3.—Cattle—The market is weak, but prices steadled today at a decline of 20c to 25c from a week ago. While prices have weakened under heavier receipts this week, the slight break from recent top prices has not so far assumed the nature of a real slump, and the present decline may be only temporary. Conditions which brought about the recent sharp advances have not materially changed, and the slightest improvement in the demand for export cattle will probably send prices again on the up grade. Choice heavy exporters are this week easier, but choice butcher cattle of handy weight are still none too plentiful, and the wholesale butchers in some instances of the standard of the some instances of the standard of the standard of the some instances of the standard of the

This is Quite a Drop From Last Week's Figures—A Slump in Butter Was Noticeable Today.

The demand for hay on the local market was very brisk, due to the small supply which has been coming in. Several buyers were unable to get any this morning, and the loads went off at a high figure. Several loads went off at a high figure. Several loads went off at a high figure. Several loads went as high as $12.50 per ton, but the bulk of the sales was around $12. Several inferior loads went as low as $11.50. However, none of it had to go begging for buyers.

The market for straw is very weak. Six loads were in and sales were very slow. From $6 to 36.50 per ton were the ruling prices.

Oats Are Sought.

Goed oats are in strong demand, as was finally knocked down to the highest bidder at $1.30 per cwt. This is rather above normal, but it shows the demand which skits. The only other load in this morning load at $12.50 considerable was sold at $12.50. One load of wheat was sold at the even figure of $1 per bu.
