BUTTER WAS PLENTIFUL

igg Prices Are Easy-Vegetables Offered in Abundance—A Big Market Today.

Buyers and sellers flocked to the market this morning, making the biggest Saturday market this spring. Yesterday's holiday and the fact that Tuesday is also holiday, tended to make a large maret this morning. Butter and eggs were the chief articles on sale, and every farmer was well

Butter is coming in in large quantities, and the wholesale dealers are commencing to put it away in cold storage. The price asked for dairy pound prints varied greatly this morning.
In the dairy hall the ruling figure was per lb, while some asked as high

A Peculiar Situation.
Out on the square 23c to 24c was the modest price asked. There is no apparent cause for this great diversity in prices, beyond the fact that buyers appear to be willing to pay more for butter in the dairy hall.

The quality is apparently the same, the The quality is apparently the same, the only difference being where it is sold. The wholesale dealers were paying 18c to 20c per lb for store and mixed lots, and 20c to London, May 21.-In a letter to Mr. Harcourt, commissioner of works, a "In the inclosed account of the relic known as the Wilkinson heirloom' I have endeavored to prove that it is none other than the embalmed head of Oliver Cromwell. I would appeal to you, firstly, as the nation's custodian of our historic treasures and, in the second place, to your sense of hereditary homage as a direct descendant of the great Protector, that his remains may be recev-Abbey, from whence they were originered and rinterred in Westminster ally exhumed in 1661.

"You will recollect that when tooth, a piece of neck bone, and the head in 1813 on the occasion of the hands of our present sovereign he had them placed in a gold casket and reinterred in the royal vault whence they had originally been extracted Surely the head of Cromwell deserves equally reverent interment."

Mr. I. Harcourt replied that "at the time of the late Mr. Wilkinson's death I wrote to the executors to know if they were willing to dispose of the so-called 'Cromwell' head, and they declined to do so. Have you any reason Goes Down in Fifty Feet of Water to think that they would change their minds now? As you are obviously to think that they would change their aware, from your interesting article there is very grave doubt as to the genuineness of the relic." The correspondent replied that he was not aware of any reason which would induce the present Mr. Wilkin son to part with Cromwell's embalmed head. "But," he asked, "has not the state a right to redeem that which it originally possessed if surreptitiously obtained? Unfortunately I there is very little doubt as to the genuineness of the 'head' in question.

I don't know anything as to the early history of the property, but I am free to admit that, except in the rainy season, the occupants did not obtain much water from this well. It is lined all a the way down, I may say, with brick, and portion of the beard of King Charles everything is in a fine state of preserva-I.—which had been removed from tion. There is no doubt in my mind that an old-fashioned pump, or, in lieu there the opening of the coffin—came into of, 'the old oaken bucket,' obtained when this well gave out its supply to the residents of Muddy York."

The premises in question were occupied for many years by the Nasmith Company, but there is nothing attaching to the property of an historical nature any of the old records.

It is pointed out that Gen. Alfaro, the president of Ecuador, is now near the Bolivian frontier, with his army, and it is altogether probable that the delay in receiving his indorsement of the plan is due to the difficulty encountered in getting into prompt communication with him. In the view of the officials of the department, the plan is sure to eventuate successfully and the retirement of the two armies from the frontier may be expected very shortly.
