

And the city was most delightful and cheerful,
And it would every beholder animate and cheer.

In the evening our streets were thronged to excess,
With ladies and gentlemen of all classes,
The grand and most superior scene to witness,
And all exclaimed this of all scenes surpasses.

This grand celebration day will make a lasting Impression of loyalty in every heart,
To our Queen in all—in children now arising In particular, and from our Queen will not part.

God bless our Queen & Her Royal Consort the Prince,
And may our Queen and Prince Albert long live,
And may we always show our loyalty and good sense,
By our allegiance to our Queen to show and give.

And when our Queen and Prince Albert shall be no more,

'Be received into heaven with God above,
To reap the reward of the righteous that's in store,
And ever more to sing all redeeming love.

THE Celebrated Captain Marryatt's remarks upon me and one of my poems, copied from his works, entitled his "Diary in America." "I must not however omit to inform my readers, that at Toronto, I received a letter from a brother author who was polite enough to send me several specimens of his poetry, stating the remarkable fact, that he had never written a verse until he was forty-four years of age, and that as to the use
