

Echoes.

How about the "Geak Vurbs" and the 'Cotten seeds?"

Fair Sem: "But don't you think that some of the Cads are very nice?"

B—r (Last December) "Yes, I'm a Freshman wat'er you?"

There is some talk of D—s taking to himself a better half before long. No doubt this explains his presence in the kitchen!

The following is an extract from the "Yukon Nuggets" of recent date: "On the evening of Dec. 10th the old Klondyke Hotel was the scene of more than usual activity. Two placer miners (placers of Minard's goods upon the roof) who had made their pile (of grub to disappear) during the three years of their stay in these diggings, had resolved to break up camp and move to other climbs, and so an auction sale was started, with Davy Rattletop as auctioneer. Our friend Davy who is from New Brunswick, is no tenderfoot, and we may safely say that if any flies abode in Klondyke they would not have time to roost on him. The auction was a marked (mostly with a spike) success. Everyone in camp was there, from the senior Duke down to the little bread-spoiler (B-k-r), one of the latest arrivals on the field, who doesn't care for gold, but has staked a claim in rich brass-bearing territory, which has already yielded large returns. Intense excitement prevailed throughout the whole sale, relieved now and again by fits of weeping when the owners saw some beloved relic fall under the relentless hammer.

Lost, strayed, or stolen between twelve and two o'clock, one evening in December, a small stick surmounted by a round ball of candy. The owner does not value it for its intrinsic worth, but because of tender associations offers a large reward for its return to Senior C.

On the evening before the closing for holidays the Freshmen had a gay old time in College Hall. The ties formed by three long months of college life were about to be broken for a while, and so a grand farewell was held. The following programme was admirably carried out:

1. Grand promenade. Chopsticks march, Museum skeleton drum-major.
2. A Game of "Hide and seek" in which the Juniors and some of the Faculty took part.
3. Candy Contest—Who can take the biggest bite of lasses candy. Prize cake of Tutti Frutti—awarded to T—r.
4. Game of Blind man's Buff.
5. Music???
6. Game of puss in the corner.
7. Recitation, Old Mother Hubbard.
