

THE Rev. J. J. Bogert, rector of St. Alban's has been appointed Archdeacon, as that position became vacant upon the elevation of his predecessor in that office to be Dean of the Cathedral. Archdeacon Bogert has done a good work for the church, and the appointment is a very popular one. He has the hearty congratulations and best wishes of the whole diocese.

A LETTER from the Rev. Father Osborne, dated from the Mission House, Mazagon, Bombay, on the 25th March, says: "Just now the only topic in Bombay is the plague. About 13,000 have died, almost all heathen and Mohammedans, very few Europeans, not more than six or eight in all. About 400,000 people have left the city, but they are beginning to come back, and it is feared that on their return the plague may again increase. The daily death roll has gone down from 250 to 70. In February I preached a mission to Europeans in Rangoon Cathedral. At the end I told them of Ottawa, and the Intercessory meeting which has lasted ever since, with its paper of Intercessions; and proposed that they should commemorate their mission by establishing a similar one. I am going to England in May, and as I have not been there for more than a few weeks for twenty years, it is thought best that I should stay there for a year before going out to any work abroad. There is also a good deal I can do in England."
