To do so, we will first ensure that results can be demonstrated by establishing clear objectives for programs and projects and by specifying realistic results that are linked to program priorities. We will improve the reporting of results to Parliament and to the public, in part through revisions to the Main Estimates - submitted annually to Parliament - to make them clearer and more results-based. The Government will also share more widely the results of evaluations and lessons learned to better inform the public, as well as Canadian, multilateral and bilateral partners, and to improve development programming. We will strengthen consultations with bilateral partners and continue support for programs which build development awareness and provide Canadians with information on Canada's development activities.

International Assistance is a vital instrument of Canadian foreign policy. It promotes prosperity and employment, protects global security and projects Canadian values and culture.
