

This House also thinks that Canada claims more than ever a mining policy directed so as to:—

(a) Protect our human capital against diseases which generally threaten the mining labourers;

(b) Encourage to a greater extent technical and geological teaching and to give proper employment to her graduates;

(c) Give work to her employable unemployed before all others;

(d) Favour colonization while preventing further rural exodus;

(e) Organize and protect local markets for the distribution of goods produced by Canadian farming and manufacturers;

(f) Prohibit all immigration which might be inimical to her fundamental institutions and which might constitute, in her mining centres, seats of disorder and agencies of revolutionary propaganda.
