JANUARY.—We have often recommended our young farmers to devote some of their long winter evenings to useful reading. An intelligent and thrifty farmer says: "But for the co-operation of my boys I should have failed. I worked hard, so did they. The eldest is near twenty one, and other boys in the neighbourhood, younger, have left their parents; mine have stuck to me when I most needed their services. I attribute this to the fact that I have tried to make home pleasant for them. I have furnished them with attractive and useful reading; and when night comes, and the day's labour is ended, instead of running with the other boys to the railway station and adjoining towns, they gather around the great lamp, and become absorbed in their books and papers." Give then to the young people good books and magazines.
