

ACTIVITIES ARE VARIED WITH BRITAIN'S WOMEN

One picture shows a pretty English girl selling roses for war relief, another shows a London actress tickling her toes in the River Thames before taking an exhibition drive—also for the benefit of Red Cross funds, while the larger shows the pickiest of all—an Englishwoman doing hard manual labor in the barrel room of a vinegar factory, to help out her pension, her husband having been killed in the war, leaving her with several little children.

MARRIED IN MELROSE, ARE IN ST. JOHN TODAY

The wedding of LeRoy H. Sandall of this city to Miss Edith Foster Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Crawford took place on Saturday evening at 7:45 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in Melrose Highlands, Mass. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, with pink and white carnations and greenery, and a pretty feature of the arrangements was an aisle of ribbons, held by six little girls, through which the bridal party passed. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. O. Paisley, pastor of the Congregational church.

The bride, who was gowned in white satin trimmed with Georgette crepe, with train and bridal veil, and carrying a bouquet of bridal roses, was attended by Miss Hattie L. Greenly, who wore pink blue tulle and carried a bouquet of pink roses. After the ceremony a reception was held and, later in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Sandall motored to Boston. Leaving there yesterday, they arrived in St. John this morning. They will spend the next few months at Mr. Sandall's summer cottage at Dry's Cove.

The Nightingale's Song Here is a fine descriptive writing on the wonderful effect of the nightingale's song.

Then, in the solemn stillness, the nightingale began to sing. Three clear notes rang out from the echoing copse; it was like the voice of the organ in a great church. It sounded over the fields, die away in a low, hushed fluting. Now louder and staccato, like the spiral stair of metallic sound, the notes rang out, high and low alternately, in quickening time, a running, rustling and rioting with long-drawn pippings, wonderfully sweet, that rose in a storm of bell-like tinklings, limpid as water, with a strength, a violence, a precision exceeding the music of a hundred thousand tiny cailloux pealing through the silent night. And now again the notes were softly weaving their fabric of sound, bewitchingly quiet, intimately sweet; musingly careful, like the music of tiny glass bells; and once more they were louder and again they faded away, borne on the still wind like the murmur of angels praying.

A valuable relic was recently found in Riggsville, Me., in the shape of a large brass eagle, originally made for a figurehead on a ship. It weighs 27 pounds, stands 29 inches high and measures 18 inches from tip to tip. It is known to be more than 100 years old. The age is verified by the fact that the casting was made in two pieces and then brazed together.

DARING AIR FEATS

British Airman Chases Five Enemy Planes—German Who Hid in a Shed.

The Air Board has decided to publish at intervals a resume of the principal incidents described in reports received from the Royal Naval Air Service and the Royal Flying Corps in various theatres of war. The following is a selection from the first of these communications:

On May 20, Flight Sub-Lieutenant A. when four miles off Blankenburg, observed a German seaplane diving down to 4500 feet. The pilot succeeded in getting above and behind this enemy, and fired 25 rounds at close range. The enemy machine was observed to swerve and dive into the water and sink.

On the same day an attack was made upon Dunkirk by hostile aircraft. Several British machines went with the object of cutting off the enemy. On the return journey, Flight Sub-Lieutenant D. attacked three machines in turn. One, a large two-seater, started to smoke, and nose-dived toward the sea. Another officer in the air at the same time says he observed in the same locality what appeared to be a machine on fire.

Flight Sub-Lieutenant E. when six miles out to sea, observed five hostile machines, which he attacked. One dived steeply. The others made good their retreat. Flight Commander A. followed the raiders out to sea. He closed with three, and opened fire. One toppled over suddenly, and nose-dived out of sight. Reloading the pilot attacked another, which dived steeply. A third escaped. It is probable, probably two or three machines were destroyed.

On May 4, Second Lieutenant C. sighted a hostile machine between Hel and Clerly, which he attacked. The German tried to land, but hit a wire fence and broke up. Lieutenant C. chased the pilot and observer, whom he saw running across fire. One fell; the other hid in a shed. Lieutenant C. returned safely under heavy fire.

On the same day Captain T. was killed by anti-aircraft fire. His observer thereupon climbed into the pilot's seat, and, although the machine had himself unhurt.

On May 16, twenty-seven combats in the air took place. Lieutenant D. and Corporal S. attacked an Albatross near Lille. After a spirited and skillful maneuvering the hostile machine went down rapidly, and was seen to strike the ground at the cross roads south of Lille. Smoke rose from the spot, and only one wing was visible. A Fokker then attacked, but on a Bristol Scout, when flying at 12,000 feet, saw an Albatross at 5,000 feet over Grivity. He descended and attacked until within a few yards, when the hostile machine turned and got into a nose dive. When about 200 feet from the ground it was seen to turn upside down.

The queen paid a recent visit to the Girls' Trade School, Hammersmith, Eng., and watched the girls who are learning how to conduct the business of a grocer at work. Courses of training have developed the scheme, and new methods have in some cases been evolved out of the needs of the workers. Now that the school has been in use for some time, it has all the aspects of a first-class grocer's establishment, for the principles of order and perfect cleanliness are among the first lessons acquired. Individual skill varies, of course; some girls are quicker than others at the necessary mental arithmetic, and some are more nimble of finger. There is a uniform standard, however, of method and cleanliness. When, for instance, a student has to select a biscuit tin from the symmetrical rows she knows it has to be replaced exactly. Some 200 are already filling appointments as successful assistants to grocers. Employers express themselves highly satisfied with their new employees, and it is generally believed that the woman grocer has come to stay.

GOOD THINGS COMING TO THEATRES OF ST. JOHN

MABEL TALIARFERO, IMPERIAL TONIGHT

Mabel Taliarfero, at the Imperial tonight, will be a charming newcomer for moving picture enthusiasts. It will not doubt be agreed that she is the cleverest interpreter of child roles on the screen today, and her wonderful versatility is demonstrated in the picture now being shown, viz.—"Her Great Price," for she is shown as a plain young woman of ordinary life, a gammon of the tenements, a lady of wealth in fine gowns, and again just a sweet, natural ingenueness. The Metro production as positively bewitching. The remainder of the Imperial's programme tonight will be "Siberia, the East Unknown" (first instalment), and the splendid Pathe British Gazette, giving Allied war news. Tomorrow afternoon, "Fog Of the Ring," will be shown in addition to the regular programme.

GEM STARTS WEEK WELL

There is a very attractive programme for tonight and Tuesday at the Gem. Douglas Fairbanks, Broadway star, is featured in a five-part story, "Habits of Happiness," an alluring subject treated in masterly style. See him as "Sunny Wiggins." The comedy, "A Bath-house Blunder," is one of the best yet—a screamingly funny time at the seashore, with Mae Busch as the belle of the beach.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Blanche Sweet in "The Sowers," a powerful photo drama of love, politics and intrigue, at the Opera House tonight. Also another good travel picture, Australia's Unknown, showing many interesting scenes and happenings in out of the way spots in this wonderful country.

BUSY PORTLAND

Portland, Me., July 17—The commerce of this port continues to mount up, and the question, "what will be the final figures for 1916?" has become a matter of guess work. At this time the reserve of wheat in the elevators is about 1,500,000 bushels, the wheat in cars in the Grand Trunk yards and on the tracks in this immediate vicinity is said to be about 3,000,000 bushels more, and there are rumors that another allotment has been made to Portland from the wheat ports of 5,000,000 additional bushels. The export business from here has assumed enormous proportions, and the end is not yet. The war has put Portland on the map to a very unexpected degree. The customs house people believe that the year will not only be a record breaker up to this time, but that it will be hard, if not impossible, to equal or even to equal in the future.
