Buried Himself To Evade Arrest

James H. Baker, of Toronto, reversed the action of the ostrich, which buries its head in the sand to ward off an approaching windstorm, by interring his body in the cellar of his home and leaving his head exposed to the view of Dominion officers who were seeking him for an alleged contravention of the Military Service Act. The original charge against Baker was alleged evasion of the M. S. A., but, later, charges of forgery and perjury were laid against him. It is alleged that in 1917 Baker was called up under the act for military service. Not wishing to serve, he is alleged to have forged a birth certificate, giving him the age of thirty-five. He swore to this age when called upon, the Dominion authorities say. Dominion Inspector McClintock was responsible for Baker's arrest. Hearing that Baker was living on Sherbourne street, the inspector, with local officers, called at the house, and on searching the premises found Baker hiding in the cellar. He had dug himself in. But his right foot showing above the ground gave him away. A sack was over his head.

MORE GERMAN INTELLIGENCE?

Paris, Dec. 10—Aeronautical experts have pointed out often that it is dangerous for the Allies to permit the Germans to build new air machines or to use their powerful old ones unless the Allies limit and control their use. Such fears seem fully justified by a document published by Le Journal. A photograph shows a huge German machine which was captured by the Romanians in Bessarabia when the machine, which was flying to Russia, was forced to descend because of engine trouble. The machine in itself is nothing remarkable, except that it shows the size of the machine, which is one used to bomb London during the war. But the cockpit of its passenger cabin throws new light on the allied German undertakings with Soviet Russia. The cargo of the machine, which was piloted by two German officers, with the aid of three mechanics, included 500,000,000 roubles (normally $10,000,000), a special press for printing roubles, and millions worth of jewelry. Among the papers found on board, it is said, were documents which clearly show Germany's intentions in regard to the Russian powers.

The machine has five engines, each of
