During the Boer war Mr. Solomon proved an unfailing friend to the Canadian contingents, aiding them in every way possible and making their stay in Capetown a pleasant one. Many times during the war he was instrumental in forwarding provisions, money, tobacco and other luxuries to the Canadian troops which they would otherwise have had to do without. Any Canadian in Capetown was welcomed at his palatial home with almost a fatherly hand and upon the return thip at the close of the war he placed two of his immense warehouses at their equipments until ready to sail. He further entertained them with several pleasant memories of his unrestrained hospitality.
