Great Picture Producers and Distributors Declare Death of Sex-Appeal Plays.

An agitation started recently against sex appeal pictures has resulted in definite action being taken by producers. Benjamin H. Hampton's article, "Too Much Sex Stip in the Movies," published in the Pictorial Review, stated the belief that the industry was incurring the wrath of thoughtful men and women.

Not only have the motion picture people "cleaned house," but their action has the co-operation of the vaudeville interests and the music publishers.

Picture Makers' Action.

In New York a committee representing all producers and distributors except three, banded together and adopted resolutions which will make it impossible for exhibitors to show their productions where such exhibitors show salacious pictures. All service will be withdrawn from such exhibitors.
Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, said: "Not only have we been successful in putting all picture menaces properly before the various legislative bodies, but all this will do no good unless we have pictures eliminating entirely salacious elements."

Clean Pictures Profitable.

In Los Angeles the most largely attended meeting of the Motion Picture Producers' Association of America was addressed by W. W. Hodgkinson, the well known distributor. Mr. Hodgkinson stated that the total volume of theatre business was about eight hundred million dollars a year, and that it would increase to a billion and a half dollars the first year of clean pictures.

He issued instructions to his Culver City studio as follows: "No pictures showing sex attraction in any suggestive or improper manner shall be produced, and no pictures shall be produced in photoplay titles and advertising matter."

"No picture shall be produced which makes drunkenness or gambling or traffic and stories dealing with the underworld shall not be presented unless such scenes are merely a part of a conflict between right and wrong. Nothing is to be pictured which might hurt in the methods of committing crime."

"No incident in a story shall needlessly offend the holders of a religious belief."

A THRIFT CREED.

The attention of those who think "thrift campaigns" are intended for everyone but themselves is respectfully requested to the ten-point financial creed of the ten commandments of "thrift." It will take but five seconds to read them; it may take more time to ponder them:—
Work and earn. Make a budget. Record expenditures. Have a bank account. Carry life insurance. Own your own home. Make a will. Invest in reliable securities. Pay your bills promptly. Share with others.
How many who consider themselves "thrift" can answer, "I do" to all ten of these? How many can say they follow half of them? Can anyone pass 100 per cent. on the test?
Can the man who has a bank account, carries insurance and owns his home say he has made a will? Yet the will is as important as the bank account, the insurance and owning a home, for it is designed to protect and provide for dependents after death just as the three others are in life. Investment in reliable securities is good counsel, and so is that to pay bills promptly. And how many are there who make it a point to include in their creed the final commandment. The first of the year is a good time to check up on all these things.—Worcester Telegram.

METHOD OF SENDING KISSES BY MAIL

The English patent office has issued a patent to the Messrs. Valentine on a method of sending a kiss by mail. It is described thus: "A post, letter or like card is provided with means for making an impression of the lips of the sender. The person presses a card, carrying a piece of cloth or other material covered or impregnated with a colored substance, such as bronze, to the lips, and then kisses the card, leaving the impression thereon."

The patent, of course, gives to the appropriately named firm the exclusive right to manufacture and sell such kiss cards, but it does not deprive any girl of the right to kiss a card with her freshly rouged lips and to send the card to the man of her heart. The ideal substance, with which to print the kiss is a mixture of honey, gum arabic and cochineal. This will dry on the card and the kiss will be sweet when received.

FAMOUS PLAY FILMED

When a play, produced for the first time twenty years ago, is still a success, it can be said to be a great play. "When We Were Twenty-One," written by H. V. Monro, is that play. Seen by the many possibilities of it as a screen drama, Jesse D. Hampton purchased the film rights, resulting in the Pathe Special starring H. B. Warner. "When We Were Twenty-One" was first produced in London in September, 1901, with such stars in the cast as Nat Goodwin, Arnold Daly, Maxine Elliott and Constance Collier. So successful was it on the continent that it was brought to America, where it reached the height of its success and gave Mr. Goodwin his greatest role. The role does not suffer in the least in the capable hands of Mr. Warner. In fact, the entire cast live up to all expectations in the pictorialization of a really great play.
