WRONGFULLY ACCUSED.

It has been many long days since then, yet I remember it all, just as though it had occurred yesterday.

I was a carpenter, the foreman of a large establishment, and as such possessed the entire confidence of my employer, who by the way, had been an old school-mate of mine.

One day he called me into his office to look at some rare coins he had just purchased.

"Here," said he, placing in my hand a heavy gold piece, "is one which is worth more than all the rest put together. It is a great curiosity. I paid $200 for it, and consider it cheap at that. I could easily double my money in selling it; and so you see, Harvey, it is a good investment."

"No doubt it is," said I, "though it seems a large sum to have to lose."

I breathed an involuntary sigh as I laid the coin down on the desk; for $200 would have seemed a fortune to me just then.

The severe illness of my wife and one of my children, and the death of another, made serious inroads on my purse, and I had required the utmost economy to keep myself free from debt; nay, I had been obliged to withdraw from the bank the small sums, which, besides my salary was all I possessed of worldly treasures.

Thinking of this, I laid the coin down with a sigh, and turned away to attend my duties.

The next morning I was again summoned into the office, but this time I met with no friendly greeting as usual.

"Harvey," said my employer, abruptly; "that coin we were looking at has disappeared. I have made a thorough search, but it is not to be found. It has been carried away by some one. You alone saw or knew of it, and—"

He paused to rest, looking down from the dizzy height with a coolness that astonished me.

"A stroke with a light hatchet that the architect had hung at my back, and piece by piece the rotten cross fell to the ground."

My work was done, and as the last fragment disappeared I found a sad pleasure in the thought that about my neck would have simple means to supply the wants until my next employment.

Steadily and cautiously I lowered myself from block to block, and a length reached the step which the architect placed a rod of rank noise in my hand.

"You have well earned the money," he said. "It does me good to see a man with so much nerve—but bless me! what is the matter with your hand? It was black before you made the ascent, now it is grey!"

And so it was. That moment of intense agony, while slipping helplessly downward, had blanching my hair until it appeared like snow. I had been in the air for years had been in an instant.

Entering the bare, cheerless room, which was now all I called my home, I found a visitor awaiting me—my late employer.

"Harvey," said he, extending his hand, "I have done you a great wrong. I cost me a terrible amount of money, but I am glad to see you here, and I am glad to see you here."

My heart was too full to speak; I declared my innocence, and he, in return, gave me a check for $200.

"I will undo the wrong I have done," he said. "I will give you a check for $200, and I will give you a check for $200."

All the world shall know that I have been wronged, and that I have been wronged."

You must be my partner, Harvey. If you refuse I shall feel that you have not forgiven me."

I did not refuse. Indeed I thankfully accepted the offer which my friend so generously made, knowing that no surer method could have been devised to silence forever the tongue of slander, and free my name from the unmerited reproach which had of late rested on it.

Unmerited prosperity has attended my steps ever since that eventful day, and neither prosperity nor wealth can efface its memory from my heart, nor restore my withered locks to their old raven hue.

HOME TESTIMONY.

ST. JOHN, N. B., March 30, 1873.

I have been afflicted with gravel and stone upon the right side of my back for several years, and could bear of it no longer. I had tried every kind of medicine, but without success. I was advised to try Margeson's Calculifuge, and I bought a bottle of it, and used it according to the directions. I was cured in a few days, and I am now perfectly well. I can truly say that Margeson's Calculifuge is a most valuable medicine, and I would recommend it to all who are afflicted with gravel and stone.
