

- 854; reception of signals, 852-853; relationship of CBCIS to Department of External Affairs, 849-852; relay and transcription services, 853-854
- foreign and domestic policy trends
- aid to under-developed countries and competitive co-existence between East and West, 917-933; benefits to West of Soviet aid, 919-920; forms of Soviet aid, 926-927; long term actions to offset Soviet aid efforts: commodity agreements, 924; involvement in major development projects, 922, 932; possible Western support for SUNFED, 919, 922-924, 930-931; promotion of Colombo Plan, 921-922, 931; necessity of West to maintain current aid programs, 919-920; potential use of UN agencies as conduit for all development aid, 929-932; relation of NATO to under-developed countries, 932; short-term actions to offset Soviet aid efforts, 921; value of Soviet and Western aid, 928
 - domestic situation since Stalin's death, 952-967, 980-986; collective leadership, 953-954; Communist party and government re-organization, 954-957; consumer demands in USSR, 982-983; economic situation, 957-959; legal reforms, 959-961; religious and cultural problems, 962-963; treatment of minorities, 961-962
 - foreign policy since Stalin's death, 944-951, 977-980; establishment of relations with Germany (Federal Republic), 947-948; exploitation of satellites for domestic gains, 983-984; participation in international conferences, 945-947; participation in UN bodies, 948, 950; relations with Soviet satellites, 949-950; replacement of Shepilov by Molotov as Foreign Minister, 979-980; Sino-Soviet relations, 978; Soviet economic offensive, 949; Soviet policy towards Middle East, 978; unchanged position of East-West relations, 951
 - impact of Eastern European events on USSR, 968-976; defence problems of satellites, 971; economic problems of satellites, 971-972; importance of satellites to USSR, 969-970; necessity of firm Western response to events in Poland and Hungary, 968-970, 975-976; political problems of satellites, 972
 - relationship of NATO to USSR, 940-943; possible reviving of Council of Foreign Ministers, 942-943
 - USSR-Yugoslavia relations, 933-939; atomic energy cooperation, 935-936; Belgrade Declaration, 934; cultural relations, 936; economic and technical cooperation, 934-935; impact on West, 938-939; implications of Twentieth Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and de-Stalinization, 936-938
 - official visits and exchanges, 828-848; application of Canadian policy to Soviet satellite countries, 841-842; Canadian aide memoire to USSR outlining Canadian policy (Mar. 28, 1956) and Soviet response (June 5, 1956), 835-838, 840-841; denial of entry visas to persons invited by communist or communist-led organizations in Canada, 831, 835, 837n, 838-840; effect of Canadian policy on Canadian Congress of women, 837n, 839-840; Interdepartmental Panel on the Exchange of Visits: establishment and terms of reference of, 832-835; position of Canada, 831-832, 842-843; public perception of Canadian policy, 839; restriction of exchanges following Hungarian Revolution, 845-846; US policy concerning exchanges and possible easing of Canadian restrictions, 843-845; USSR policy concerning exchanges, 829-830; USSR representations to resume exchanges following Hungarian Revolution, 846-848; value of exchanges for Canada, 830-831; visit of Canadian Olympic hockey team to Prague, 828-829
 - trade agreement with, 880-901; composition of Canadian negotiating delegation, 880; key issues: arbitration of disputes, 887; limitation on number of Soviet diplomatic and trade representatives in Canada, 881-883, 891; non-discrimination by state enterprises, 891-893; treatment of natural and juridical persons of each contracting party in the territory of the other, 884, 886-891; treatment of Soviet shipping, 885-886, 890-892; wheat sales, 881, 891-893; opening of Soviet trade office in Vancouver, 896-901; terms and approval of final agreement, 894-896, 896n
 - Twentieth Party Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union