The President replied: I can only say now, as I have often said before, it has often been a sentiment with me that all mankind should be free. So far as I have been able, so far as came within my sphere I have always acted as I believe was ght and just, and done all I could for the good f mankind. I have in a letter and documents, sent forth from this office, expressed mysel ter than I can now. In regard to the great Book I have only to say: it is the best gift God has given man. Mr. Seward.-Extract from speech at Au ourn, N. Y.—"The chief complaint against the President is that he will not accept peace on the basis of the integrity of the Union, without baving also the abandonment of slavery. When and where have the insurgents offered peace on the basis of the integrity of the Union? No body has offered it. The rebels never will offer Nobody on their behalf can offer it

Although altogether unauthorized to speal for the President upon hypothetical questions, I think I can give an answer upon the subject of slavery at the present day—an answer which will be explicit, and I hope not altogether un-satisfactory. While the rebels continue to wage war against the government of the United States the military measures affecting slavery, which have been adopted for necessity, to bring the war to a speedy and successful end, will be con inned, except so far as practical experience sha show that they can be m with a view to the same end.

When the insurgents shall have disbanded their armies, and laid down their arms, the war will instantly cease—and all the war measured then existing, including those which affect slavery will cease also: and all the moral, econom and political questions, as well questions affecting slavery as others, which shall then be existing, between individuals, and States, and the Federal Government, whether they arose before the civil by force of the Constitution, pass over to the arbitrament of courts of law, and to the councils

The sun is setting. So surely as it shall rise again, so surely do I think that the great events we have now celebrated prelude the end of ou national troubles, and the restoration of the na tional authority with peace, prosperity, and free-dom throughout the whole land, from the lakes to the gulf, and from ocean to ocean."
