

On Leave

By Clare Atwood

A Y.M.C.A. Canteen at one of the great London termini, just before dawn. Canadians, glad of the generous hospitality of the Y.M.C.A., arrive and enjoy breakfast and a rest—some with their leave before them, and some returning to the front. A Canadian "Black Watch" is seen giving his sergeant a light—others are discussing the war over coffee, and two exhausted men have fallen asleep.
