SWEETENING FROM CORN COBS

A compound about 300 times as sweet as sugar has been evolved from corn-cobs by Dr. Henry Gilman and A. P. Hewlett, organic chemists at Iowa State College, reports Science Service's Daily Science News Bulletin (Washington). It says:
Should this new compound prove to be harmless to the body, it may become valuable as a sweetening for food for diabetic patients who cannot use sugar. The work is in a preliminary stage, and the value of the new compound is undetermined, according to Dr. Gilman. Perhaps perfume bottles and household extract bottles in the future will be filled with compounds derived from corn-cobs. During the past year Dr. Gilman and George Wright have produced from the corn-cob many new compounds which may prove valuable as perfumes and food flavors. Although physiological reactions of the new compounds have not been thoroughly determined, early tests have been promising. Most of the new compounds possess fruity, pleasant odors, while one especially promising compound may possibly be used for maple or walnut flavoring, or as an attractant and friendship.

added flavoring for coffee, raisins, caraway, and apple flavors also have been produced. One compound, a perfume possibly, has an odor resembling champagne, a heavy, fragrant perfume made from the flowers of an East India tree, while another compound has the fragrance of roses. The work with corn-cobs is a part of the work with agricultural wastes being done at Iowa State College. At a recent exposition in New York, a local anesthetic developed by Dr. Gilman and associates was shown. This anesthetic is approximately as effective as novocain.

CATCH LIVE MULLET FOR JEW

Fishermen in Southampton, Warrington and other fishing centres of this county have contracts every summer to deliver a certain number of tons of fresh fish packed in ice to fish companies in the larger cities and in the good old summer time considerable fish is taken up transferring the fish which are packed in ice and sent by express, especially on the afternoon train at Palmerston. Russell McLaughlin of the 18th Con. Sullivan, and Andy Maxwell of the same township, have a fresh-fish contract too, but they must deliver the fish alive, says the Chesley Enterprise. They have contracted to supply seven tons of mullets at $100 a ton to a number of Yiddish folk in Toronto. Fresh-water tanks are sent by truck or rail to the point in Sydenham township, Grey County, where mullets come up from the bay into a creek in such numbers that the water is fairly black with them. Russ and Andy and their helpers grab the fish near the gills, the least slippery part of the fish, and take them in buckets full to the tanks and they are sent alive to Toronto where they are in special demand at this season by those of the Israelitish faith. There are lots of bones in the mullets as there are in suckers, but taken from cold water they make fairly good eating and are a cheap food.

It pays to cultivate good manners, maple or walnut flavoring, or as an attractant and friendship.

WIT AND HUMOR

BRAIN CAPACITY

Frank—I always say what I think. Ethel—I wondered why you were so quiet.

Business is Business

"What are you doing at a Ku Klux Klan meeting, Ike?" You can't join! "I don't want to join. I want to talk to the fellow that buys the sheets and pillow cases."

What A Combination!

The Port Elgin Times reports the following: "Reeve McLaren is adding cigars, tobaccos, pipes and smokers' accessories to his coal, wood and insurance business."
The Port Elgin Reeve should also stock a few gas masks and electric fans.

Blindfold Test

Cora—Does that rich young man of yours write convincing letters?
Dora—I can't say. The case hasn't gone to the jury yet.

Teacher—Where do we find the nicest vegetables?

Bobby—In the seed catalogue.

Rose—Why is the lettuce looking so wilted?

Mary—The potato was all eyes and saw her dressing.

Mabel—How long should garden hose be?

Abel—Well, they should be long enough to cover your knees, anyway.

A man walking along a muddy road

saw a hat in the road and kicked it. Someone hollered "ouch!" A man was under the hat, up to his neck in mud. "Pretty muddy, isn't it?" he was asked.
"Brother," said the man in the mud, "you don't know half of it. I'm riding a horse."

With a stormy look on his face,

the master of the house waylaid the servant in the kitchen.
"Look here," he began angrily. "How dare you tell my wife what time I came home this morning, after I told you not to?"

The Irish girl eyed him steadily.

"Sure, oi didn't," she replied, calmly. "She asked phwat time ye came in oi oi only told her oi was too busy gettin' the breakfast to look at the cock."

"No, Herbert, I am sorry; but I am sure we could not be happy together. You know I always want my own way in everything."

"But, my dear girl, you could go on wanting it after we were married."

Then Henry Said —

"My razor doesn't cut at all."
"Why, Henry, you don't mean to tell me that your beard is tougher than the oilcloth?"

A Fast Worker

"Every time I kiss you, it makes me a better man."
"Well, you don't have to try to get to heaven in one night."

It takes more than 1,500 nuts to hold an automobile together, but it takes only one to scatter it all over the landscape.

Dot—What became of your new portable garage?

Spot—I tied my dog to it, but unfortunately a cat came along.

She—Can't you feel the call of the open road?

He (sighing motor cop)—Yeah, and I think we're going to hear it, too.

Knew Her Onions

"Come into the garden, Clarisse," But Clarisse was far too wise. "Not so long as the corn has ears, Or the potatoes so many eyes!"

A Cross Dog

An Irishman was seated in a train beside a pompous individual who was accompanied by a dog.
"Foin dog, ye have," said the Irishman, "Phwat is it?"
"A cross between an Irishman and an ape," the man replied.
"Sure and it is related to both of us."

Didn't Want a Bath

"I'll have some ale, please."
"Pale?"
"Good gosh, no; a glass will do."

Then Let's Stop

She—If you men would stop looking at us girls in short skirts, we'd soon stop wearing them.
He—Yes, I suppose you'd have to do something drastic!

Compensation

She—Jack, I was wrong to treat you the way I did. You will forgive me won't you, for being so angry with you last week?
He—Sure, that's alright. I saved $12 while we weren't on speaking terms.

And often the flower of a family

is only a blooming idiot.

PAISLEY MILL WRECKED

Another tremendous downpour of rain on Saturday afternoon and evening caused more serious damage to both mill and home property to add to that produced by the high flood this Spring. The Teeswater river became swollen to such an extent that at Carlaw's dam a wash-out occurred at the north side which completely undermined the sawmill so that building collapsed shortly after midnight and fell into the stream lodging securely against the cement wall of the flume. All the walls were broken down, but the roof remained almost intact. The floor held together fairly well, with the machinery attached. The mill, which formerly stood over two years ago on the bank, supported by cement pillars and was considered to be quite safe from such a fate as has befallen it. On Saturday night the proprietor and some of the men looked over the place about 11:30, and did not notice any indication that showed danger of a wash-out. Not more than an hour later the mill fell with a roar, that was mistaken for a crash of thunder by those who heard it. The damage was not noticed until Sunday morning, when an early motorist saw it and called up the proprietor.

Mr. Carlaw had by Monday arrived at the decision not to rebuild, but since has received so many generous offers in the way of help in the labor of refilling the bank and reconstructing the mill that he is reconsidering the matter and may rebuild. As Stark's sawmill was wrecked by the flood, we are at present without one, and farmers realize that this condition would be a great inconvenience to them when they should need logs cut into lumber, etc.

A pile of lumber, 12,000 feet of 2-inch elm, also fell into the stream during the night and was carried away by the strong current. A good pile of this has been located, lodged down the river, and can be recovered at considerable expense.

At Mrs. T. W. Brown's residence on "The Flats," preparations had been made to build a new foundation. On Sunday morning it was found that the rains had made so much of a wash underneath that there was danger of part of the house being wrecked, and it was necessary for the men to place timbers underneath to hold it up. Townspeople were rather astonished upon seeing builders going about their trade on the Sabbath, but as the house threatened to fall asunder, it was an urgent call for their services.—Paisley Advocate.

THIRTY DAYS IN JAIL

George Taylor is spending 30 days at Walkerton with free board as the outcome of a trial on a charge of making home brew and also having liquor without a permit. The trial was held here on Wednesday morning before Magistrate Walker. Taylor had the option of paying a $200 fine, but he took the jail sentence. It was his third conviction. The Walker took occasion to read to those in the Court Room the new provisions of the Liquor Act which come into effect on May 20th, 1929. After that date convicted offenders will get three months in jail with no choice.—Lucknow Sentinel.

PORT ELGIN COURT CASE

Only one case was aired before Judge Sutherland in Division Court here on Thursday morning last, being that of Brill vs Williams & Schlee. This was an action brought by Mr. George Brill, carpenter of town, against Messrs. Williams and Schlee of Warrington, proprietors of the Brewery here, to collect $100 which the plaintiff claimed was due him for work done on the warehouse property in October of last year, and which included laying a new floor in the back part of the building, cutting an archway in the wall, fixing steps, repairing roof, plastering hole in wall and building cage on roof counter, which bill also included material used. The defendants disputed Brill's account to the extent of $2.67, claiming that he had contracted to lay the floor, cut the archway and repair the roof for $75.00. Plastering the hole in the wall was to be extra, and they were satisfied with his charge of $7.10 for this work, also with his price of 1.40 for building cage on counter which was later done, and which they claimed brought the total amount owing Brill to $93.50. This in amount, Mr. Neil Cassidy, manager of the warehouse here, had tendered Brill early in January but he refused to accept it. Brill contended that he had no contract with Williams and Schlee, and when asked for the estimate of what it would cost to lay the floor, cut archway and repair the roof he claimed the old them that it would cost around $75.00. He was instructed to procure the materials and do the work, there being no specifications as to material to be used. He claimed he could have done the job for $75 by buying cheaper material, but it would have made a poor job. Witnesses for the defence swore that Brill agreed to do the job for $5.00.

In giving judgment allowing Brill $5.10 of his claim, His Honor took occasion to tell Messrs. Williams and Schlee that he did not like their method of doing business with this man and that they had taken advantage of him and having him do the work for next to nothing. The cost of the action, amounting to $13.85, His Honor saddled on the defendants which, when added to the solicitor's fee, will set them back financially more than what it would have cost them to have paid Brill his claim. It was an thr case of losing to win.—Port Elgin Times.

CLOTHING CAUGHT FIRE

On Monday afternoon little Margaret Mitchell, four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mitchell, Success Street, was so severely burned that her life is in jeopardy. She, with Glen Flynn and Loretta and Dorothy Shewfelt, were playing at lighting matches. The children were in an old auto at the rear of McPherson's Garage.

Little Margaret's clothes became ignited, and had it not been for the presence of mind of Mr. Deb. Shewfelt, the little one would have been burned to death. Fortunately he came out to examine a car. He heard a scream and looking up saw the child enveloped in flames. He tore off his coat and ran to her, wrapping the coat around her and succeeded in saving her from the flames.

Mr. Armour McCullough ran to his assistance and tore off the lower part of the child's dress which was in flames. At once Mr. Shewfelt ran to the home of the child's parents with her in his arms. Medical aid was summoned and the little sufferer is being given the greatest care and attention. She was removed to the hospital Tuesday morning. The public will extend sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell.—Kincaid Review.

DRIVERS TAKE WARNING

A driver should remember that he should not make any move at all without giving ample warning of his intentions to all other road users within sight. He should slow down at corners and signal to the people behind. He should signal his intentions to stop. He should sound his horn before turning from one road into another road and always be on the alert for vehicles coming from the opposite direction. And he should always give a hand signal when pulling up. Before doing this he should see that he has his proper markers on, because he has no right to drive a car until he has. There will be a car until he has. After this stop at all Stop Signs—showing up does not fill the bill. Stop means stop. To cause an accident means carelessness. Don't be careless. Keep your brakes and lights in good shape. If you don't, leave it to the Traffic Cop to have a maximum number of fines. If you want to park any length of time use the side streets as much as possible. Try and keep the business section as clear of cars as possible. If you have to pay a fine, thank yourself for it.
