SELF RESPECT

nud is to black his boots," says Fredrick Douglass

This happy remark often occurs to This happy remark often occurs to us when we see boys going to school with shoes that have never once knows the breath, with hair uncombed, faces not too clean, ears unft for in-spection, hands very black, and a cap that has evidently known hard service as a missile weapon. Such a boy is more likely at least both to talk and to act unbecomingly than one who is clean ard tidy. Something within the tidy boy compels him to live up to his appearance. The other boy is apt his appearance. The other boy is apt to live down to his dirty boots.

Fixing upon a boy an odious and elittling nickname which lowers his self esteem has the same tendency. So does ridiculing him for any natural defect, and for the clumsines often results from such a defect. The mistakes of youth frequently result from shyness, and this is greatly ag-Come immediately and see the gravated by the jeers of companions, and still more by the impatience of a
