POPULAR LINEN DRESSES.

They Are Made With Strapped Seams and Trimmed With Coarse Lace.

Linen dresses are to be very smart this summer. There is a new shade of reseau green much used for dresses of this kind. It is trimmed with heavy white lace and touches of black velvet.

Linen dresses are made with fairly long skirts heavily strapped and are worn with Russian blouses decorated with lace or the smartest of coats with Irish crocheted collars. Scarlet and navy blue are perhaps the most useful shades, but there is just now a demand for purple and mauve, which make up charmingly with ecru lace.

A linen dress is harder to make than one thinks, and many a beautiful piece

LINEN SUITS.

Material has been spoiled by a sagging skirt and a sloppy looking waist. Linen requires careful fitting and accurately stitched seams to look at all well after even a couple of washings.

A very smart linen suit is shown in the illustration. The material is striped ecru and white, and it is trimmed with strapped applications of plain ecru linen. The blouse has a collar of all over lace over a pale blue foundation.

With this is worn a waist of tucked batiste, a pale blue sunshade and a hat of black and white straw trimmed with a pale blue and a tan ostrich feather.

fountains that many net and gauze skirts are covered almost to the waist with tiny frills. Tunic draperies are aptly tucked or alternately tucked and inserted from the top of the skirt, and fountains or frills of varying dimensions surround the hem.

Glaze or satin slips are usually made with a separate founce, but so arranged with a stitched strap over the waist that the effect is almost that of a plain skirt, but the edge is extremely full, and the back spreads out well. The heavier makes of Roman satin form delightful slips for the present limp trailing fashion of skirts, and with one in white or cream and another in black several variations can be effected with transparent robes.

This dainty muslin gown has both waist and skirt tucked in a down point. The sleeves and the wide founce at the bottom of the skirt is headed and edged by two narrow founces. The costume is trimmed with perpendicular bands of lace insertion.

The Lament of the Adult.

IN one of Dickens's novels—those novels which we are tearfully assured nowadays are not in the least funny—an ungrateful brick-maker rejects the little volume which has been brought him, because "it's a book fit for a baby, and I'm not a baby. If you was to leave me a doll, I shouldn't nurse it."

Something of this ungrateful spirit stirs within our middle-aged hearts when we read a modern story, or see a modern play. It is probably the nicest kind of a story, and the nicest kind of a play, and if we were only fourteen instead of forty, or fifteen instead of fifty, we should thoroughly enjoy them both. Nothing is better calculated to make us regret our lost youth than fiction and the drama as they exist today. With what glorious emotions we should have dilated in childhood over Mr. Crockett's desperate brigades, or Miss Johnston's dauntless heroics. How we should have steeped ourselves—aggravatingly speaking—in gore, and revelled in romance. Sicilian bandits, noble Indians, cruel half-breeds, courtly villains and heroines of wild, untutored beauty—time was when these things made our pulses jump. But now seventeen murders excite us less than one, and duels are no longer the thrilling episodes they were in the happy past. It is hard to grow old, and it is made harder by the fact that nobody, save one's family doctor, has anything untidily betsy-time was when these things made our pulses jump.
