BROCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know by numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the cougher of the afflicted.'—J. J. J. Vidal, San Cristobal, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first use. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Atlanta, Ga.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

ESTEY'S

Iron & Quinine Tonic

"This Medicine combining Iron and Quinine, cures all the ailments which are caused by a weak, nervous, and indigestive system. It is an unfailing remedy for Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.

It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to women, and all who are delicate and nervous. It does not irritate the stomach, cause headache, or produce constipation—other Iron Medicines do.

It enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, relieves Headaches and Belching, and, strengthens the system and nerves.

For Intermittent Fevers, Lassafula, Lack of Energy, &c., it has no equal.

The Quinine has its true mark and signature. Take no other.

Prepared only by E. M. Estey, Moncton, N. B.

"I declare, Phoebe, if you don't find more ways to help people on your small income," I replied. "But you really ought to give up keeping boarders; it makes you so much extra work, and don't pay half as well, as the prices you ask those boys, as doing up laces."

"I know it," she admitted, "but I want some one to mother my boys round me, if they are alone in a big city. I don't mind giving up the front room upstairs, nor letting them have a fire evenings and Sundays, if it keeps them out of temptation. You'd feel like crying to see the bare attic room, and the vile stuff they got to eat when they boarded, for they can't afford, out of their beginning wages, to pay more than two dollars a week, all told. They help me with the work at night for their washing, and their mending isn't much. The letter I got from Jim's old mother last week paid for the extras. Think, Miss Norton, he's give up cards and smoking since he came here. Joe's too delicate, every way, to live in a rough life. Oh, I'm glad to have 'em, and her face shone with a satisfaction that was resting to see, yet brought a mist in my eyes not exactly caused by the stove kettle before me. I knew very well the extra work, the close planning, and the sitting up late to iron and mend it cost her to 'mother' those two strangers. I felt ashamed of myself as I compared my pretty, modern home with her plain, even bare little home, but to her I know love made it seem a palace.

"You'll not mind now, my dinner's on, if I put the kettle on for your laces. I know the sun is going to shine, and I want them out a few minutes before I hand-dry them," she said as she brought out another large kettle.

"If any one would suspect the sun of any good intentions to-day it would be you, Phoebe," I said, laughing myself.

"Don't those heavy kettles tire you? You used to suffer with your back, I remember."

"I do yet," she admitted. "I hope some time Ben will get work enough so we can save enough to get a good stove with a boiler on. This does very well, though, for the price we paid. It was old-fashioned when we went to house-keeping, but I'm glad I've plenty of kettles. It saves time."

"Phoebe, you make me ashamed of myself. It's hard enough for me to get along with hot and cold water at my hand, and a girl to lift my kettles for me, they are so trying—not the kettles, Ben ought to fill them for you, anyway."

"He's poorly now, and he's tired when he gets home, for he's got some work

UNAWARES.

A song welled up in the singer's heart (Like a song in the throat of a bird.) And he sang, and far it rang— For his heart was strangely stirred; And he sang for the very joy of song, With no thoughts of one who heard.

Within the listener's wayward soul A heavenly patience grew; He faced on his way with a benison On the singer, who never knew How the careless song of an idle hour Had shaped a life anew.

A KETTLE SAINT.

"Set down, Miss Norton, while I lift off this kettle."

I was glad to rest, even in the hot little kitchen of my poor neighbor. The east wind had given me neuralgia outside, and Bettie, my 'girl,' had just broken a valuable platter and given me some rude words about it, which gave me neuralgia of the inner man. My usually indulgent husband had declared express must be reduced, and hinted his mother did her own work, besides rearing eight children. Now, the modern woman, with a thousand demands on time and strength, her foremothers never dreamed of, hates above all things to hear of their doing more than the busy women of to-day. I regret to say that I made some fitting reply, and—an almost unheard of thing—Jim snatched the door and went off without the good by kiss. Of course, I was not in the humor to get the children off to school in the pleasant way, and was thankful enough when Betty fell asleep (he had refused all night) and I could run out in the open air a moment.
