FIRED ON TRAWLER

TROUBLE WITH STEAM FISHER-MEN ON QUERO BANKS.

Captain of a Fishing Schooner Has Part of His Gear Carried Away by a Steam Trawler, and Fires on Her With Rifle.

North Sydney, N. S., June 15 .- The trouble which has been brewing between French steam trawlers operating the Quero banks and American, French and Newfoundland hand line fishermen has at last broken out, and a clash has taken place on the Quero bank, in which revolvers and guns have been used. Vessels which arrived here to-day from Quero tell of a sensational encounter between the crews of the American fishing schooner Senator Gardiner, Captain Vincen Nelson, and one of the French steam trawlers. The vessel had been watch Neison, and one of the French steam trawlers. The vessel had been watching for two days for a chance to set her lines, and a clear space was at length found where none of the trawlers appeared to be in sight. "No sooner were her dories out than a large French trawler was seen to bear down towards them and approached so near that it carried away part of the Gardiner's fishing gear. All protests failed to induce them to move off, and Captain Nelson, becoming exasperated at the loss of his gear and time, quickly loaded a rifle, using leaden sings made out of mackerel jigs cut in pieces. As the Frenchmen were in the act of pursuing their trawlers, Captain Nelson fired point blank at the steamer. The result was almost disastrous Another shot struck the rail of the French trawler, but with the exception of a few splinters no other damage was done, and they hurriedly moved away. The same day a French fishing schooner lost nearly all of her tarwles and lines by another steam trawler, and no less than ten trawlers appeared in the immediate vicinity of where these vessels were fishing. This schooner's captain boarded the trawler which had done the damage to his fishing gear, and, brandishing a revolver, demanded that damages be paid for the loss sustained, but no heed was paid, and he was forcibly ejected from the steamer's deck.

On the following day a Newfoundland chooner had all of her fishing gear car-ried away, and had to leave the Banks and lose several days in order to obtain a new outfit.

Many captains of fishing schooners are indignant at having been prevented often from settling their trawls, owing to the presence on the shoal grounds of these trawlers. It is the opinion of many that violent encounters will assurdly take place during the summer months as the result of the encroachment of the steam trawlers on the grounds used by fishing schooners, and which threaten to seriously interfere with the pursuance of hand-line fishing on the Banks. ment of the steam trawlers on the grounds used by fishing schooners, and which threaten to seriously interfere with the pursuance of hand-line fishing on the Banks.

This is a great convenience. The Army Service Corps has charge of the post office, but Capt. Ecclestone is camp postmaster. He was in South Africa, and acted in the same capacity there for some time, and at the Tercentenary celebration at Quebec last year he had charge of all the mail delivery.

The camp grounds are laid out this year practically the same as formerly. The cavalry brigade is stationed at the extreme southerly end of the common, close to Paradise Grove. HAMILTON'S NEW GUNS.
Great attention has been directed to the new 18-pound guns in camp, in charge of the 4th Field Battery, of Hamilton, and the 7th, of St. Catharines. These guns are of the very latest type, and the Hamilton and St. Catharines men have four each. Ottawa also has four, while the 9th Field Battery, of Toronto, is left with the old-fashioned kind. These guns, which were made by Vickers, Sons & Maxim, are the very latest models. Suicide of Laughrin Cameron at

New Liskeard Laughrin Cameron deliberately committed suicide by drowning himself in the lake. The body was taken out a few minutes later, but life was extinct. He had been around the camp for years, and in Kenora. He seems to have tired of life, having spent the last three weeks at Liskeard in a despondent-condition. He attempted to secure a Winchester rifle last night with which to kill himself, but was frustrated, and jumped out of the window about 2 o'clock and into the lake, about a hundred yards distant. There are many amusing incidents in connection with the camp. Yesterday two young men who were promoted to the rank of sergeant for the camp, went downtown to see the sights, and incidowntown to see the sights, and incidentally to let people see that they were full sergeants. The town is policed by the Royal Canadian Dragoons during the camp, and the police have very full powers. The two sergeants in question were strolling majestically down the main street when they were stopped by a private on horseback, who inquired where they were going.

Some of his men had already tired of the fine times in London, and were ready to go back. 'We don't need passes," replied the '. D. S. "Can't you see the stripes on ur arms? We're sergeants." Stories of Some of the Witnesses Move Her to Tears.

Former Stew rd Declares She Once Drank Steadily For Two Weeks.

New York, June 15 .- The defence had its inning to-day in the trial before Judge Dowling in the Supreme Court of the suit for separation and alimony rought by Mrs. Howard Gould. Early in the day Mr. Shearn, Mrs. Gould's counsel, when evidence was about to be introduced to show that Mrs. Gould had contracted the liquor habit, strenuously bjected, declaring that the only just fication for Mr. Gould abandoning rife would have been conduct which ould have afforded him ground for divorce.

Smoking cigarettes, riding a horse astride, wearing loud clothes or doing anything susceptible of being considered anything susception of being considered misconduct by any standards would just as well justify separation, accord-ing to Mr. Shearn, if "simple tippling" could do so. The learned counser quoted other authorities to show that intoxicaother authorities to show that intoxication was not ground for divorce.

"Adultery prior to the abandonment,"
Mr. Shearn finally argued, "would be the only possible justification, the charges of cruelty and non-support having been disposed of."

After W. Nicoll both made his answer. After Mr. Nicoll had made his answer the court ruled that "gross and con-tinued intoxication" would constitute "We claim." said Mr. Nicholl, "that for a number of years, beginning in 1902 or 1903, Mrs. Gould, on occasions in-dulged in alcohol to excess, rendering her unfit to discharge her household Justice Dowling said that it must be shown that there was continual, gross and often repeated intoxication, with no attempt at reform. The court added that he believed it to be the husband's duty to make every effort to live with her.

After this ruling by the court Mr.
Nicoll, counsel for Howard Gould, started in with a vigor to show that Mrs.
Gould had been so often intoxicated and so abusive that her husband was justiso abusive that her husband was justified in abandoning her. He put on the stand as his first witness Morris Molloy, the young superintendent of the Castle Gould estate, to prove that the woman who spent $40,000 per year on clothes and had to change her gown three times a day "because it was good form," had been so drunk that she could hardly stand straight:

MRS. GOULD BREAKS DOWN.
While Alfred Richards, who had been a steward at Castle Gould, was on the witness stand, Mrs. Gould for the first time during the trial showed emotion. She broke down completely, and laying her head on the table in front of her wept so loudly that the whole courtroom could hear her. Richards had been asked to repeat what she said to two workmen on the estate in 1905. two workmen on the estate in 1905.
"If the court will permit me to repeat

"Yes," permeat least the said.

Then Richards, saying he was quoting Mrs. Gould, broke forth in language of the grossest character. She used several oaths, he declared, in ordering these men from the place.

Molloy was employed at a salary of $7.500 a year, with a contract that provided for $10,000 for the second year. He told of estates which he had managed in Europe to prove that he was worth that much to Mr. Gould.

Mrs. Gould listened with unmistakable indications of anger while Molloy recited his various encounters with her at the Long Island country place, and definitely swore to her condition of intoxication during several of the incidents. She grew positively furious while other employees of the State described her drinking habits and the violent and profane language which they said she used to her husband and to servants and to her husband and to servants and workmen. VERDICT OF MANSLAUGHTER.

Fight in a Montreal Boarding House Led to Zatvorensky's Death.

Montreal, June 15.—A verdict of manslaughter yas returned by the Coroner's jury at the inquest to-day in the case of John Zatvorensky, whose battered body was found floating in the river, opposite Dominion Park, last Saturday. The verdict orders the arrest of Wonnofsky and Letchesky, but they are not to be found.

Evidence showed that a desperate fight had taken place in a Polish bearding-house a week ago Sunday, but none of the witnesses, although they were all in the house at the time, could tell the cause of the quarrel, or what became of the victim after he had been thrown out. The fight followed a drinking spell in connection with a Polish wedding.
