Is the Kaiser a Criminal Lunatic.

"An insane degenerate of homicidal instincts and tendencies, unfit to be at large, who ought to be detained in a criminal lunatic asylum for the rest of his life." This is how Arnold White describes the German Emperor in a little book, "Is the Kaiser Insane?" published by C. Arthur Pearson (Limited). Mr. White's opinion is based on a close study of the personality of the Kaiser. It is confirmed by the opinion of a well-known British alienist (M.D.), who has had exceptional opportunities for obtaining evidence on the subject, and will probably be supported by most people in this country, says the London Standard.

In 1902 the author was accorded an interview by the Kaiser. It lasted almost an hour and a half, and illustrates William II. as the garrulous egotist whose speeches have made the British laugh for many years. He was apparently suffering under the delusion that our success in South Africa was due entirely to him. For example, he said: "On our three disasters in December, 1899, I sat down and wrote to Grandmamma, and told her what was wanted to make success. This plan of mine was carried out by Lord Roberts a quarter of a year later. I saved South Africa for you. What have I got? Abuse. . . . If the Berliners knew all I had done for England they would be very angry."

He was perfectly willing to discuss his ideas for the government of England should he by any chance succeed to the throne. Unfortunately for the public, von Tirpitz interposed. At the last personal vanity overcame Imperial dignity. His final words were a query as to whether he had hypnotized his visitor.

The Kaiser has often in the last few months emphasized his close personal relations with the Almighty. That the delusion is no new one is instanced by the following.

On one occasion he dedicated a number of Bibles to the new Berlin Garrison Church. In each he wrote:

"I will walk among you and will be your God, and ye shall be my people."
"Ye shall walk in all the ways which I have commanded you."

"Without me ye can do nothing."
He signed each sentence, "Wilhelm Emperor Rex."

Instances of William's lunacy can be multiplied indefinitely. There is his intense personal vanity which causes him to dress in ten or twelve different costumes daily. He imagines he is a composer of music and plays, and oblivious of the ridiculous figure he cuts, insists on taking the principal part in performances. Another delusion from which he suffers is that he resembles Frederick the Great in face and figure.

After reading the book it is impossible not to form the conclusion that a criminal lunatic asylum is the place for which by nature William II. is best fitted, and that the soon he is safely installed there the better.

British Navy to Use
Speedy Stabilizer.

New York, Feb. 16.—Following closely on the successful conclusion of the tests of the Sperry gyroscopic aeroplane stabilizer, which have been made recently at the Brooklyn Navy Yard for the benefit of Lieut. R. C. Saufley, as the official representative of the United States navy, it has developed that this Brooklyn-invented and Brooklyn-made device has also been accepted by the British Admiralty for use in its aeroplane service. The White Star liner Adriatic to-day takes the first of the stabilizers which have been ordered by the British government.

This machine is for use on the America, the great flying boat with which Commander John Cyril Porter planned a transatlantic flight until the great war stopped the trials he was making under the patronage of Rodman Wanamaker. Although the America is nearly double the size of the flying boats used in the United States navy, there is no change in the stabilizer from the accepted type used here, except in the auxiliary motor, which provides the power for the gyroscopes. These are of the ordinary size, but the motor is slightly larger, adding about three pounds weight. The stabilizer for the America is accompanied by Morris Titterton of the installation staff of the Sperry Gyroscope Company, who will act as instructor in its use for the British naval aeronauts.
