

Why Not 8% and ---Safety

THE old idea that safety accompanied a low rate of interest has long been put in the discard.

During the past 7 or 8 years, with banking facilities strained to the limit under abnormal demands, however in the AAA class (Breadstreet's highest rating) have been obliged—compelled by circumstances beyond their control—to pay rates of interest without precedent.

Bankers today tell us that money is working easier—THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY to assure to yourself a high interest return for a long period of years, with a large margin of safety, by investing in the 8% convertible debentures of The Mount Royal Hotel Company, Limited, carrying a bonus of 30% common shares.

A MAD POLICY.

SYDNEY, March 23. The coal miners' executive to-day voted 4 to 3 in favor of Secretary's MacLachlan's policy to reduce the output until the profits of the British Empire Steel Corporation vanish. If the miners adopt this policy a lockout is expected to follow.

WILL NOT TOLERATE VIOLENCE.

WASHINGTON, March 23. A warning that the Federal Government would tolerate no use of violence to prevent coal production during the threatened strike, was issued by Attorney-General Daugherty.

WANTS BOYCOTT REIMPOSED.

DUBLIN, March 23. Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defence in Dail Eireann, to-night issued statement saying any officer or man attending the proposed conference on Monday of the Irish Republican Army would thereby sever his connection with the army, but that for the present the commanding officer would regard each case as one of suspension. The Irish Labor Party Executive has adopted a resolution calling upon the Dail Eireann to reimpose the boycott against Ulster.

bers featured in the closing speeches demanding that the old intercolonial railway, built under the provisions of the confederation agreement, be divorced from the Canadian National railway system and have its management installed at Montreal as under the old regime. While expressing loyalty to Canada the Prince Edward Island members claimed that confederation had been of doubtful benefit to them as they had been cut off from the natural market in New England.

THE FLOWBOY.

I saw him as a train went by. A plowboy with a whistling eye. And this I know, he heard the grim, Far, noisy city calling him. And where the train was carrying me I knew he dreamed some day to be.

I knew long after we had gone He watched our big cars hustling on. For I had read his wistful look As clear as a printed book. And I had seen upon his face His yearning for the bigger place.

Above the whispering of the trees, The gentle murmuring of the breeze, The crows' "Caw!" and the chattering of birds, The lowing of the nearby herds, I knew that boy, so straight and tall, Could hear the city's constant call.

I think, as oft I hurry by, That look haunts every plowboy's eye. He stands beside his horse, and seems To view the city in his dream. And this he seems to cry aloud: "Some day I'll join the city's crowd!"

Mixed Menu Muddles.

At a luncheon given in his honour by the Merchant Taylors, the Duke of York said:—"I confess I am glad to think that times have changed since the banquet given to James I. when his son was honoured as I am to-day. I should hardly have relished the diet of owls and cuckoos with which he was regaled."

A reversion to the tastes of our forefathers would cause some strange dishes to figure on the dining table. In the thirteenth century the heron, the crane, the crow, the cormorant, and the bittern were considered dainties. The hare and partridge were despised, and were never seen on the tables of the rich, Edward I. when he was "Food Controller," fixed the price of pike higher than that of fresh salmon.

In the reign of Henry V. a favourite dish was fresh sturgeon served with whelks. Roast porpoise was also thought fit to set before a king. Another popular dish was sheep's heads soured in ale and served with onions, garlic, and leeks!

In Tudor times it was the general practice to pour honey over meat, and most of our ancestors' dishes would be too rich for modern palates. Even the most accomplished dinner-out would shrink from oysters stewed in wine, pigeons stuffed with gooseberries, grapes boiled in butter, and mutton stuffed with oysters.

But we will still back a public-school dormitory for weird compounds, such as sardines, condensed milk, cake, and jam. The writer heard some boys discussing tasty dishes, and the lover of haddock and pickles seemed to be the leading epicure, until a quiet lad gave an additional order:—"A half-penny-worth of raspberry jam!" Then, when his bluster came, he stuffed it with jam and ate it solemnly, to the admiration of his comrades!

YOUNG WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Letter Points Way Toward Relief—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ontario.—"I suffered from the time I was a school-girl until I had taken your medicine with pain in my left side and with cramps, grow- ing worse each year until I was all run down. I was so bad at times that I was unable for work. I tried several doctors and patent medicines and was only relieved for a short time. Some of the doctors wanted to have an operation but my father objected. Finally I learned through my mother of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how cheap and I am that I tried it. I am relieved from pain and cramps and feel as if it has saved my life. I am glad to recommend the medicine."—Mrs. H. A. Goodman, 14 Rockvale Ave., Toronto, Ontario.

Gorgeous Presents.

Never before, perhaps, has a bride received so many handsome gifts as has fallen to the lot of "our" Princesses. For weeks presents of all kinds have literally showered into Buckingham Palace, until it is calculated the collection, in intrinsic value alone, is worth well over half a million sterling!

From the King the Princess received a tiara necklace and bracelet of sapphires and diamonds, and from the Queen a brooch with a great sapphire as the centre, with diamonds gleaming around it. The Prince of Wales's gift was a bracelet of sapphires and diamonds—a slim straight band. Queen Alexandra gave a gorgeous necklace of pearls and emeralds, with heavy pendants hanging from the rows. The Princess Royal, Princess Victoria, and Queen of Norway have each given a brooch. The Duke of York, Prince Henry, and Prince George presented their sister with a sapphire and diamond ring.

The bridegroom's gifts were the old family jewels reset into a magnificent corsage of sapphires with a sapphire and diamond fringe, and a rivière of diamonds and a diamond pendant with two large pearl drops; Princess Mary's present to her husband was a platinum and gold watch-chain, ornamented with pearls, and a pair of antique silver soule dishes.

From the Earl and Countess of Harewood the Princess received a fine diamond brooch. An antique clock was the gift from the Princess's uncle, great aunts, uncles, and aunts, and cousins, with their signatures in a red morocco and gold book.

The King and Queen's gift to Viscount Lascelles was a picture of Lord Canning, by Winterhalter; and Queen Alexandra's was a jewelled tie pin, while the Princess Royal, Princess Victoria, and the Queen of Norway sent him an enamel-and-gilt cigarette box.

The Royal Navy sent emeralds and diamonds in the form of a cigarette pendant. The Army's present to "Colonel" H.R.H. Princess Mary from all her brother officers serving in the kingdom was a silver antique mirror with trays and candlesticks as a dressing set; and that of the Brigade of Guards was a large diamond pendant with the badges of all the Guards ingeniously grouped in its centre.

There is a long piece of priceless old lace from Lady Farquhar, and a glorious ostrich feather fan from the ostrich farmers of South Africa. Household linen of the finest Irish kind, came from the women of Ulster. "Some men and women of the stage" presented a diamond bracelet and ring; and a number of Princess Mary's close friends gave her a sable coat and an ivory, gold, and enamel tablet case, while her bridesmaids gave her a silver tray with their signatures indented. Earl Haig's gift was a quartette of gilt Scottish pipers as paper weights.

Of the novel presents that from the Prince and Princess Christopher of Greece is notable. It is a clock with opalescent sunrays radiating from a diamond star in the body of the dial. The longest point of the star always points to the hour, and a smaller diamond star moves round and points the minutes.

The Earl of Roseberry gave a peridot necklace pendant and bracelet en suite of great beauty and charm. Lord and Lady Mount Stephen have sent a negligee necktie of finest brilliant, Lady Nina, Balfour and Mr. Arthur Balfour gave a silver teapot-stand ornamented with coronet and monogram. The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland contributed an antique French clock.

Magellan, the Navigator

It is four hundred years ago since the daring Portuguese sailor Ferdinand Magellan, by passing from the Atlantic to the Pacific round the southern end of America, proved that the world could be circumnavigated. His was one of the three greatest voyages in the history of the world. Only those of Columbus and of Vasco da Gama can be compared to it, and on the whole Magellan's was the most remarkable of the three. Under the patronage of Charles V. of Spain Magellan undertook to prove the possibility of reaching the spice islands of the Orient by sailing westward instead of eastward. It was a tremendous venture; none but a man of imagination, courage, and resolution could even have begun it; to carry it through to success required heroic qualities. The critical moment of the voyage was the passage round the extremity of South America, through the strait that has ever since borne the discoverer's name. From the time Magellan's little Armada entered the straits a month elapsed before he emerged from the western entrance, to which he gave the name Pacific ocean. The intrepid navigator had to meet every kind of obstacle and difficulty—storm, mutiny, shipwreck, disease. He faced them all and conquered. When he reached Guam on March 24, 1521, his men were dying of scurvy and were eating sawdust and the leather parts of the ship's rigging. But he kept his prow turned westward, and in the end came safe to the East Indies, to the island of Cebu, in the Philippines, which group he was the first white man to visit. It was three years after the five vessels of Magellan's fleet left Seville before the single survivor—the "Victoria"—returned to the mouth of the Guadalquivir. Magellan himself was not on board, for he had been killed a year before in a skirmish with the natives of Cebu. But he did not die until he had done what he set himself to accomplish. He had added much of the greatest importance to human knowledge of the globe; and had given to the world an inspiring example of the great things that can be wrought by dauntless courage and firm resolution.
