NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

"Resolve to perform what we ought and perform without fail what we resolve."

Success in business depends happily much more on common sense, care and attention, than on genius. In small matters as in great, order and method are very important.

Never mention the word "trouble." Only tell us how we can serve you better and we will do it if we can. The wisest men make mistakes. All that any sensible man of business expects is to be generally right.

of the year.

Mr. Rathburn, in doing so, regretted
the death of our respected late clerk,
Mr. G. M. Harrison, who for the past twenty-seven years had presided at the nomination meetings. He said we had met not to honor friends or thwart enemies but to choose a council to which we might entrust our money and the progress and welfare of our good village. This year we had built granolithic walks ourselves, and he advised that we put down each year just what we could afford as a current expense. We had got the new iron bridge over the Thames in Mosa, and he told of the council's share in getting it. He spoke of the good financial standing of the village to-day, and showed how with each year it was improving. In conclusion, Mr. Rathburn referred to his long connection with the village and with the municipal council, thanked the ratepayers for the support they had always given him and asked for permission to retire from the reeveship.

Mr. W. J. Small thanked his mover and seconder and stated that as he was a member of the public school board he was not a candidate.

Short speeches by a few prominent ratepayers followed, at the close of which one of the best nomination meetings ever held in Glencoe was dismissed.

The annual Christmas entertainment in the Presbyterian church here took place on Christmas Night. The Sunday School hall was packed with an appreciative audience, young and old. The programme was varied, attractive and bright, and displayed the histrionic genius of the young people of this community to good effect. The farmers' drill, the tableau "Rock of Ages" and the pantomime "The Raven" are worthy of special mention. During the evening Miss Alma and Master Vernie Towers were presented with bibles for reciting the whole of the Shorter Catechism. A heavily laden Christmas tree was relieved of its great weight of presents for the children at the close of the entertainment. Proceeds about $45.

PREVENT DISORDER.—At the first symptoms of internal disorder, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be resorted to immediately. Two or three of these salutary pellets, taken before going to bed, followed by doses of one or two pills for two or three nights in succession, will serve as a preventive of all attacks of dyspepsia and all the discomforts which follow in the train of that fell disorder. The means are simple when the way is known.

It is said John D. Rockefeller's income is $100,000,000 a year. If he would just tell what he does with about $220,000 a week, or $2,900 a day, or $125 a minute, he will relieve us of a burdensome curiosity. Lots of us would work diligently a whole month for what he receives in a minute.

Santos-Dumont Answers His Critics.

M. Santos-Dumont has at last answered his critics. He publishes in the "North American Review" for June his first article on aerial locomotion, and, despite the criticism of scientists, he makes good his case of the air-ship against the aeroplane. Most of the criticisms have been to the effect that Santos-Dumont has been on the wrong track; that no balloon—an apparatus lighter than the air, at the mercy, more or less, of the winds of heaven—could ever become a commercial success; that though he could guide it to a certain extent, he could never be sure of reaching any point; and, finally, that the birds of the air, being themselves heavier than the air, being themselves heavier than the air, moved by means of dirigible planes air, moved by means of dirigible planes by means of locomotion, which went to prove that similar human machines could alone be successful. That was and is in the main good reasoning. But and is in the main good reasoning. But Santos-Dumont says: "Beginning with this year, I shall attempt to apply in the air the principles of aviation pro-perly so called, in subjecting my air-ships to a continual evolution. In the same proportion that I increase the ex-tent of the inclined planes symmetritent of the inclined planes symmetrically disposed at the right and left, I shall reduce the surface of the envelope of varnished silk, and, consequently, the volume of hydrogen relatively to the power of the motor. Thus I expect gradually to diminish the role of the hydrogen, making secondary its importance, which is now primary, and even completely doing away with the use of this gas. The air-ship will then have become an aeroplane in the absohave become an aeroplane in the absolute sense of the word, and I hope that some day we shall see it such. That day is undoubtedly not far distant, but the flying-machine will be achieved only by the way of evolution, by making the air-selin pass through a series of only by the way of evolution, by making the air-ship pass through a series of transformations analogous to the metamorphoses by which the chrysalls becomes the winged butterfly. My airship, which raises itself by pushing back the air, has already done better than the chrysalls whose elongated. than the chrysalis, whose elongated form it resembles. It may be that very soon nothing will prevent it from free-ing itself completely from its cocoon of silk lined with hydrogen, and from being wholly comparable to a butter-ments with a large balloon and small motors and planes. Gradually from practical experience in the air he reduces the size of the balloon, the quantity of hydrogen, and enlarges the planes and motors, and he says he has carried the for enough to praye to his carried this far enough to prove to his own satisfaction that it is only a question of time and careful study to reduce the balloon to a minimum and the aeroplane principle to a maximum. That sounds right; that is the method That sounds right; that is the method of the great entity which laid down the laws of evolution; that is the survival of the fittest. And meantime the great aeronaut is experimenting in the air and not in the laboratory, which in such evolution contains the essence of ultimate success.

It is reported that 490,000 persons are destitute and starving in Finland as a result of crop failure.

For Reeve.

To the Electors of the Village of Glencoe:

Glencoe:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Last year you were pleased to elect me to the responsible position of Councillor. During the year's work I have continually had but one object in view—to work for our town's best interest. I trust that you are satisfied with my efforts, and that you will again, at the coming election, show your confidence in electing me to a still more responsible office as Reeve. If elected I shall continue to give my best abilities and time in the service of the village.

Yours faithfully,

J. N. CURRIE.

For Reeve.

To the Electors of the Village of Glencoe:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—
As no doubt you all know, I am a candidate for the Reeveship of this municipality. Now, I am not before you as an office-seeker but as a citizen willing to give L's services for the good of his town, and if elected my whole energy will be exerted in this direction.

direction.

I am running in response to two deputations of your most prominent men, not from private ambition.

During the time that I have been a citizen of our town you will notice that I have carried on my business in a manner just to you as to myself. If citizen of our town you will notice that I have carried on my business in a manner just to you as to myself. If I had allowed any selfishness to guide me, as has been done in other towns during the last six months I should have been better off to-day by some hundred dollars. But, gentlemen, this is not my plan. It is to deal justly to all men.

Now, as to qualification, I may say that for the past ten years I have been a magistrate and so have had long experience in the most important part of a reeve's duties. I have also had experience in the Ditches and Watercourses Act, having been connected with a number of different cases. As you will see from the experience which some of our townsmen had last spring at the time of the flood this is one of the important questions and I am confident that my knowledge in this line will be of material advantage to the town.

in this line will be of material age to the town.

Now, gentlemen, if elected I can promise to serve you to the best inverest of the town. Therefore, hoping that you will give me your influence during the campaign and your vote on election day, I am,

Yours sincerely,

J. B. LITTLE.

For Councillor.

After a good deal of persuasion by leading business men of the town I have consented to allow my name to come before the electors as a candidate for Councillor, and therefore will appreciate any honest efforts put forting for my election. My policy is Economy, Honesty and Equality.
