The New Parliament.

The Act of Confederation provides that each Parliament of Canada shall exist for a term of five years, and no Five years have elapsed since the Parliament prior to the present dying body was dissolved, and April 25, 1891, was the day when the writs Parliament now sitting were Therefore, in accordance with the law, as interpreted by Dr. Bourinot, the highest authority in Canada, the present Parliament dies on April 25 next.

These facts render very significant the statement made by Sir Hibbert Tupper in the House of Commons on Tuesday night. The junior knight then declared that it was the intention of the high tax leaders to keep back the so-called Manitoba Remedial Bill until the whole of the estimates for 1896 and 1897 were passed.

Surely the Liberal and independent Conservative members who now represent far more than one-half the people of Canada, will never tolerate any such prostitution of the use of the time at the disposal of Parliament. When the Governor-General consented to the extraordinary expedient of holding a sixth session of Parliament-tactiots never before resorted to by any Ministry-it was on the express condition that the special business to be brought before the House would be That indicates a decrease in mortalthe Manitoba school question, and that ity from that one cause of more than the legislation should be proceeded with as soon as the House met on Jan. 2, 1896. The House met, but the so-called Remedial Bill was not briught down. We have the highest authority for stating that the preparation of the measure was not even begun at American Review is from the pen of that date. And instead of Parliament or rejecting the measure, we had the unprecedented spectacle of a civil servant camping at Ottawa, and caballing with six members of the Bowell Cabinet for the overthrow of the man who had brought them into promin-We had the Premier denounced as incapable and imbecile, while we had Mr. Bowell characterizing the six conspirators against him as "a nest of traitors." Thus was much valuable time consumed, and even now, after five weeks' sitting, not a single Government measure has been laid on the table. We have the demand instead that all legislation proposed by private members shall be sacrificed for the session, in order that this discredited Administration, now in a minority in the country, shall fortify itself in possession of office for a year after the dissolution of Parliament, if it is defeated in the country, as it certainly will be, or the bye-elections and other striking indications mean nothing. The intention is to have forty millions voted to carry on the Government from year from now. This outrage must not be permitted. The people of Canada will never countenance so grave a departure from British constitutional and parliamentary usage as the carrying out of the Tupperian scheme. Dr. Bourinot, who cannot be said to be prejudiced against the men in power, thus declares on this point:

80th June, 1896 to 30th June, 1897, then

hold the general elections at any date that suits the whim of the men in power, so that even if defeated in the country they may hold on to office

till compelled to meet Parliament one

"When Parliament expires by efflux of time, the Crown must immediately take steps to have the Parliament called together. The only proper interval is reasonable time to make all the writs which should be issued at once for a generable election return-There should be always a Parllament to meet a national emergency. Whenever Parliament expires it is necessary that the Ministry take immediate steps to ascertain whether they have the confidence of the people or The Government must always have the confidence of the people through their representatives in Par-

That is to say the duty of the Government is to meet the representatives of Parliament as soon as possible after the elections have been held, so as to Mscover whether or not they have he confidence of the people as voiced by those representatives. But an uncrupulous Administration, if given supplies for many months after the dissolution of Parliament, might refuse to call Parliament together, and the Governor-General could not compel to meet Parliament promptly. except by a stretch of his authority. which it is just as well he should not be called upon to exercise except in the gravest of emergencies. As laid down by Todd, the best British authority on to Great Britain, and the closest of the subject, who, oddly enough, has trade and friendly relations with our against the attempt to burden the and without danger.

country by the voting of forty milliona of dollars for the use of an Administration which may be defeated any day, and which will be sent about its business at the general election. "It is customary," says this high British authority, when Parliament is about to be dissolved, whether upon the occurrence of a Ministerial crisis or for any other reason, to restrict the granting of supplies to an amount sufficient to defray the indispensable requirements of the public service until a new Parliament can be assembled." Thus it is clearly laid down that even after a dissolution through a Ministerial crisis, the men in power shall only be given supplies for a period to cover the election and assembly of a new Parliament. Would it not be an outrage on a free people, then, for Parliament to vote forty millions to be spent by a Government whose following will be dissolved within two months, and which could use this enormous sum to keep itself in power for many months after the electors had told it to go about its business? Sir Hibbert Tupper has indeed a colossal assurance to propose that the people's money shall be so appropriated before the one measure which Parliament was called to consider is disposed of. No such betrayal of the rights of the people should be countenanced by Parliament. We will expect Hon. Wilfrid Laurier and his friends to stand between the people even after a dissilution through a Minand the gang who seek to prevent the voice of the country from being law as soon as possible after the death of Parliament, on April 25.

What Parliament ought to do: Pass or reject the Manitoba so-called Remedial Bill; vote enough of money to keep the country going till July 1, for every needed purpose, and as soon as possible let the new Parliament meet and vote the supplies necessary for the year in which the newly elected members allone ought to have paramount interest and control.

M. Monod, of the French Academy of Medicine, denies the truth of the assertion that anti-toxine is a failure. He has collected statistics showing that in 108 towns of over 20,000 inhabitants the average number of deaths from diphtheria in the first six months of each year from 1888 to 1894 was 2,-627. At the end of 1894 the Pasteur Institute began sending out the antitoxine to practitioners in those towns. And the total number of deaths in the first six months of 1895 was only 904. 65 per cent. The world progresses.

How Britain Views It.

One of the most important articles in the current number of the North the well-known author. Bryce discourses on "The Anglo-American Imbroglio," and deals in an able manner with British feeling on the Venezuelan question. He says:

"A shock has been given to public confidence, not only in the spheres of commerce and finance, but in other spheres also. A postponement, which may prove fatal of the efforts of Britain to save the Armenian Christians from extermination has most unhappily followed. Nor are we entitled to assume that all danger is over, though some of us will not believe that a shot will ever be fired by either people against the other until it has been fired. But the results of the crisis will not have been wholly unfortunate if it leads us in Britain to study and comprehend better the lines upon which opinion is moving in the United States, if it rouses both people to try to eliminate any causes for reciprocal jealousy of offense which may be removable, and if it hastens the establishment of a permanent system of arbitration for the settlement of all grounds of differences between them. Already those in both countries who realize not only the material evils of war, but the incalculable and abiding injury war infliets on the moral and political life of a nation have been awakened to a warm love of peace and a keener sense of kinship, just as the imminence of a complete rupture sometimes renews the affection of estranged relatives and leads to reconciliation. Englishmen, many of whom would have no great dislike to a war with some other power (for there is a great deal of the pugnacity of Henry the Fifth's time left among us), are thoroughly pacific in this instance, and that not merely or perhaps chiefly from prudence, but because they feel that a war with America would be a civil war, in which even victories could bring no glory-bella nullos habitura triumphos. Thousands of us have dear friends on the other side of the Atlantic. How could we rejoice In what would afflict them? or they in what would afflict us?"

And if this is true of Englishmen how much more is it true of Canadians and their immediate neighbors?

In the United States are probably one and a half millions of Canadians and their immediate descendants, or nearly one-third or our race, while adjoining republic have sought homes in our fair country. The man who lightly tries to stir up strife between two peoples, so constituted, is the worst enemy of the race.

Prof. Bryce does not put the situation any too strong. War between the United States and Great Britain-Canada being included-until every honorable compromise had been tried by both sides-would be the crime of

For these reasons the position unanimously taken up by the Dominion House of Commons, as a result of sizes the views of all right-thinking been quoted by the chief organ of the neighbors in the States. Canada has high tax party, the precedents are a position that is entirely satisfactory

By the Way.

If we know anything about South Grey and the strength of its genial and energetic representative in the Commons, Dr. Landerkin, the party by the name of Jamieson, who has been nominated against him, will receive as severe a peppering with ballots on election day as his namesake got with bullets when he paraded the Boer territory on the late filibustering expedition.

So there are almost 3,000 "hell-inspired hypocrites" in Cape Breton!

Seven of the bye-elections have taken place since Sir Charles Tupper camped at Ottawa in December, nearly all in constituencies hitherto very strongly Conservative. Here is the re-

Premier Bowell is again declared to be a mere cypher. "Wait till Tupper comes" is again the excuse for the Government at Ottawa when asked to bring on the business for which the House has been called. No wonder Mr. Bowell spoke of the men whose political fortunes he made as "a nest of traitors." They openly ignore his authority, and laugh at his leadership.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN POLITICS. Whenever a man enters politics who proves by deeds as well as by words that he means to be honest and to protect the interests of the middle class he at once becomes invincible.-Toledo present attitude of Manitoba that the majority of her people have any hatred of Roman Catholics. There is a good deal of misunderstanding on this point; and a good deal of nonsense has been talked. The real intention of Manitobans has no foundation in illwill to any part of the population, but those intentions have so far had no opportunity to be manifested. Province has practically been on her defense for the last five years, and until the struggle to maintain what she deems her rights is ended a dispassionate consideration of the grievances of the minority can hardly be expected. When, however, of coercion is removed, as ultimately it must be, the sense of justice of Manitobans will be found as active as it is in any part of the Dominion, and a readiness will be shown to remove all just cause of complaint against our school laws."-Winnipeg Tribune.

MANITOBA'S ATTITUDE. "It is not to be understood from the

The Century for February is remarkably interesting and splendidly illustriated. Dr. John W. Palmer, who wrote "Stonewall Jackson's Way." and translated Michelet's now half-forgotten but once famous and debatable books on "Women" and "Love," contributes a description of "Certain Worthies and Dames of Old Maryland," with portraits of Sir Joshua, Peter Lely, Peale, and Sully; Henry B. Stanley tells the story of the development of Africa; Lieut. Wilson, Second United States Infantry, tells how "The Kid Won His Medal." There are three pictures by J. G. Vibert, with descriptions by the painter, and a study of Puvis de Chavannes by Kenyon Cox. Marion Crawford tells something of Pope Leo's household life; Capt. Mahan describes "Nelson at Cape St. Vincent," and there are other valuable and entertaining anticles.

Pneumatic Sleeves.

It seemed at one time as if some device such as blowing up a sleeve to hold it out would be necessary, but Fibre Chamois came on the scene just in the nick of time. One layer of the light weight No. 10, put across the goods, will support any sleeve in the stiff and stylish grace which fashion demands—not for a day, but for as long as the garment last.
