IRVING'S THEATER TO BE DESTROYED

The Passing of the Historic Old Lyceum.

WHERE SIR HENRY GAINED FAME

Some Recollections of Famous Playhouse Which Is To Be Sacrificed to Exigencies.

London, Oct. 12 .- It is really surprising how much there is of interest in the history of the Lyceum Theater, for years the London home of Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, which is about to be pulled down.

The old playhouse, of which the great actor and actress took their leave recently in a performance of "The Merchant of Venice," is to be destroyed because it doesn't come up to modern legal requirements in the matter of exits, etc., nor compare well in point of comfort, not to say luxury, with modern London theaters. It is not to be rebult because it is felt its day is over.

The old house, which dates back nearly a century, has not paid for several years; in fact, it is chiefly due to visitors to London that it has remained open so long. Sir Henry Irving is said to have been enabled to continue his tenancy of the theater only through having done so uncommonly well on his tours.

The only big success the Lyceum has had in the last three years was brought by William Gillette with "Sherlock Holmes." On the first night of the engagemen+ "sounds of disapproval" as the London newspapers call them, were many and the play was dismissed rather cavalierly next morning by every dramatic critic in town, but it ran without a break for eight months and was the success of last season.

Within the last few years several well-known players have been identified with the Lyceum. Kyrle Bellew made one of the big successes of "Robespierre" when Sir Henry gave the London play four years ago. A little later Ethel Barrymore was pleasantly introduced to London playgoers as a member of the Knight's company, and Robert Taber, too, made his start in the metropolis at the Lyceum. Martin Harvey, who begins a tour through Canada and the United States within a few days from this time, also jumped into fame at the Lyceum as Sydney Carton in "The Only Way," one of the parts he is to play in America.

was Isabel Bateman, one of the famous "Bateman children." P. T. Barnum introduced them to England, following up his success with the diminu-tive Tom Thumb, and both made hits. Later on, Isabel Bateman appeared at the Lyceum in "Self." Her sister was seen in "Leah" and got to be known far and wide as "Leah" Bateman. Now, however, she is Mrs. Crowe

Sir Henry Irving's first real success at the Lyceum was made unexpectedly. For a long time, as plain "Henry Irving," he had been "useful man" the Lyceum company. Business was bad, the play then running—a bad adaptation of "Pickwick," in which Irving had played Jingle-was a failure and no more promising one was in hand.

So, with the idea of playing for time, the manager consented to an inexpensive production of a play called "The Bells," in which he had little or no confidence and gave Irving the part of Matthias. The actor played it for the first time one bleak November night to a miserably slender house. half of which was made up of "dead But the audience carried heads." home the story of what they had seen that night, and Sir Henry Irving's future was assured. The Lyceum was built in 1809, and there are few sorts of performances of which it has not been the scene in its long history. Daring ballets and full pantomines, not to mention performing horses and "educated" pigs, all have held its stage. Of beautiful Miss Farebrother, who once led the "march of the Amazons," an enthusiastic old gentleman snarled. Were it not for the abominable royal marriage act this superb creature might be even now the mother of a ce of princes.'

Miss Farebrother, however, did pretty well. She maried the Duke of Cambridge, Queen Victoria's own cousin. Of late years one of the most intersting things in connection with the Lyceum has been the famous "pit which gathers for every "Irvcrowd" ing" first night. Except to such Canadians as happen to know that particular London locality it probably will not convey much idea to say, that the crowd. generally four abreast and packed just as tightly as possible by the squad of policeman detailed to see

London, Oct. 12.-King Eward, who is the guest of Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar in North Berwick, made his appearance on the golf links early yesterday morning. Mr. Choate, the American ambassador, was also in evidence, while the King was present. As a golfer the King is no novice. Though never a very ardent or frequent player, his majesty has always shown considerable interest in the game. He was initiated into its staid mysteries as far back as his col-lege days. It was on the classic green of St. Andrew's that he most appropriately received his first lesson from hat tutelary genius of the game, old Tom Morris, who had just then from Prestwick, a young man of thirty, to take charge of the links at St. Andrew's. The King sent his physician, Sir James Reid, to ascertain if anything could be done, but the great doctor found himself unable to do anything. The King then visited the cottage himself, saw the youth, and expressed his deep sympathy for him. Then he told Mrs. Donald that the who had attended him through his serious operation and illness was still with him, and that he would send her every day to dress her son's younds, and make him comfortable also that a water bed would be sent from Balmoral Castle. He added that if she could suggest anything to please her son, it would be carefully attended

RAILWAY TO TIMBUCTOO

The French Line From Dakar Is Making Rapid Progress. Liverpool, Oct. 11 .- The Elder-Dempster liner Niger, with mails and passengers from West Africa, has arrived. When she left Dakar, the capital of the French Senegal settlement, it was reported that during the present wet season about 30,000 tons of railway material had arrived from France for the railway, which was being rapidly constructed in the direction of Timbuctoo. The line had already been constructed for some 500 miles, and it was to be pushed vigorously on during the coming dry season. About eight steamers which arrived with railway material at St. Louis from France were being seriously delayed on account of the water not rising to its customary height in the Senegal River, and they were therefore unable to cross the bar. It was feared as the season was so far advanced that the water might not rise even later and that the material might have to be transferred was standing on the back platform of to lighters.
