Ald. Taylor gave notice of motion that a committee be appointed to consider and report to the council what portions of the city property be sold towards making a reduction of the city debt. Ald. Blevins gave notice of motion for a statement of the terms on which the G. T. R. and other railway companies acquired the right to occupy the whole or any part of the esplanated. Ald. Low gave notice that the street railway company put conductors on all the cars.

Ald. Maughan moved that the clause recommended by the markets and health committee and passed by council to appoint W. W. Hodgson caretaker of the western cattle market be delayed in its execution as several matters detrimental to Mr. Hodgson's character had come under his notice, Ald. Boustead said that Ald. And Hallam said the appointment has been made and if anyone have charges to prefer against the man's character let him state them to the council. The appointment was finally referred back to the committe on markets and health to await further information.

Ald. Maughan then enquired if the railway companies were privileged to lay down as many tracks as they desired on the csplanade.

From New Years ago Mrs. Langtry's husband visited the United States. He was such a thorough gentleman and had impressed me so favorably that I felt inclined to speak to his wife about him. The rumors of an estrangement between the two, however, deterred me from broaching the subject directly, but I remarked incidentally that I had met him. A Conductor's Warning. Contributed to The World by Simple Simon Well, boys, what's this all about?
Who's been and gone and turned you out?
I see your faces looking blue.
Tell me are the tales I hear quite true?

Last night I took a walk up Yonge, And met a friend, who thus began: "Good evening, Ted; the night is fine, Would you like to take a glass of wine?" "With pleasure I will take one, please." So then we turned and walked at ease, With a min arm until we came To G. S. McConkey's store of fame.

"Come, listen, Ted, and you shall hear What names some swell officials bear, Who condescend to do the dirty To poor conductor's not quite thirty. Th. re's one named Linn, his other name I cannot now I emember. It is not Fred, it may be Frank, We call him the Pretender.

Now Mr. Linn, or Frank, said he, Had better let the servants be; If sympathy we can procure, His twenty-five per week won't be secure, He likes his glass, and sometimes takes A little more than does him good, Then on the sick list has to go, For diarrho (not drink) upsets him so.

Some harm is done by keepers two, Who sneek about the corne s, Yet if a smoke or drink is near They act not as informers.

If spies and spotters needed be Then let them take advice from me, And turn their precious wits aside And spot some other men beside The poor conductors who have to bear More roughs than smooths, all round the With scarcely screw enough to keep The cold outside, and within the heat. The pittance we receive is small

I wish they'd introduce the punch
And i of curtail the pay. The system's rotten through and through And requires great alteration
Such elever people (I don't think) should try to save
What some call botheration.

Public servants no doubt we are, And if with consideration The public will only back us out "
We shall receive commiseration A strike I would not now advise The employers to entertain, The fall is not the time for that, The spring will come again. Then, boys, we parted after that, But let me now consols you With hopes of better times in store When Tim and Mac are not before you.
