the ex-Warden Enjoys Life in Canada in Company with ills Daughter. Prom the Chicago Inter-Ocean, Sept. 2. f William J. McGarigle is not happy he least comfortable," said John D. Long, Mr. Long had lately returned from ted vacation trip, part of which was made in the company of the Cool Apple Hospital's late warden. "Alderman Apple ton and myself started nearly a month ago for the purpose of rish Comedian, SCANLON." de in the company of the Cook Cou and myself started nearly a month ago for me tour. We didn't go for the purpose of mg McGarigle, as has been stated, but we sted to see the newly opened Canadian stry, and we took McGarigle in on our . We found him at the hot spring of ff, on the Canadian Pacific Railroad. He stopping at the Sanitarium Hotel, with daughter Bessie. McGarigle was delighted see us, of course. He had many friends re he was stopping, but he was glad to see severtheless. He was comfortably located he paid for his own and his daughter's red like any other guess.

"It has been stated that he had engaged in the hotel business at Banff, but this is not so. He will probably stay at that place until sold weather drives him southward to some one of the larger towns. He seemed happy in his daughter's society, but he is a lonely man. There are a great many nice people in the Northwest Territory, and I found that McGarigle knew most of them. He was glady welcomed everywhere, and was the honored guest at more than one society gathering while we were there.

"When we went further west we took him while we were then one society gathering while we were there.

"When we went further west we took him with us. From Banff we went to a place called Donald, on the Columbia River, which we ascended by boat a distance of 100 miles or more. We had a great time. McGarigle was at his best. His manner is more subdued than it used to be, and he was vastly entertaining. He told us stories of his new friends and his latter-day hopes and expectations.

"From the Columbia river we went west to Vancouver and the end of the Canadian Pacific. There we met John Hanagan, who is in the real estate business. From there we went to New Westminister, at the mouth of the Frazer River, and saw the salmon canneries and other sights, and a mine or two in which McGarigle thinks of investing.

"Mac thinks of going into the transfer and stage business at Banff. After we had returned there, I tried to dissuade him going into the business, I don't know with what success.

"He felt pretty sad when we parted from him."

the business, I don't know with what success.

"He felt pretty sad when we parted from him. He gave me a bearskin to carry to his son. Georgie. He shot the animal himself. He madel many enquiries regarding his old friends, and sent regards to many of them. He would like to return to Chicago, but recognizes the impossibility of so doing. He seems to think that in a year or two when the boys get back from the peniteutiary, matters may be straightened out, so that he can return without fear of consequences. He said to me:

"I do not think he will go to Europe. He was pleasantly situated enough in Canada, and I think will never leave that colony unless to return to Chicago. He gets the papers and keeps posted, but has lost the thread of affairs horse and colors."

Ist horse and horse and horse and the colors are the colors and horse and colors are the colors and horse and colors.
