Wild-oyed and almost breathless mon rushed into the little hamlet of Samsonville, Ulster County, on a recent afternoon and sank down or haused on a bench in front of the wildage Post Office. The men were Ephraim Du Bois of Samsonville and "Jin" boutcher, a well known old mountain guide of the Oatskills. The men, when they had recovered sheir con_osure, related to the villagers a thrilling tale of an encounter they had had with bears at Sampson's Clearing, a wild and pleturesque spot distant from Samsonville about fire miles. Early in the morning the men started out from Samsonville with the intention of bagging a brace or two opartridges or woodcook. In the timention of bagging a brace or two opartridges or woodcook. In due time they secured several brace of the birds, and it was decided to hurry home. They had walked several miles when the sturdy guide lost his footing in going down a steep bank and fell heavily to the ground. When his companion ried to raise him, it was found that his ankle was badly wrenched. Finally he was assisted to his feet by Du Bois, and the two had resumed their walk, when the old hunter pointed to a near by log to the right of them. The decayed log had been torn asunder, and the dry punk seattered about the ground. The two men decided to citole about a few feet distant from the log in search of further traces, and within a few moments met again to compare results. "Bear?" queried Du Bois. "Bears," whipered the old hunter, three of 'em, an old one and two young 'uns."

The trail was soon found and the two men silently tramped on through two young 'uns."

The trail was coon found and the two mon silently tramped on through the wilderness. As is well known among the old hunters of the Catskills will run from a man if he have a chance to escape, but should one be cornered the hunter is sure to meet an animal that is particularly ferceious, and Bruin will fight to the death, especially if fighting in defense of its young.

and Bruin will fight to the doath, especially if fighting in defense of its young.

Carofully over the fallen trees and through the brush, which in some places was so dense as almost to shut out the light of day, the trail was followed. It led to a spring hole, and in the soft and apongy ground around could be seen plainly the huge flat fect of the old bear, together with the lighter imprints of the little cubs. After an hour or so of the most exhausting effort the hunters arrived at the foot of a gigantic cliff that apparently had no path to its summit. Sheer 800 feet it rose above them, the huge mass of rock apparently barring their further progress. Thoroughly tired and worn out, it seemed as if the pursuit must now be shaftdoned, and to add to their troubles the ankle of the old hunter caused him the most excruciating agony. Gritting his teeth and uttering maledictions on his unhappy hight, the brave old guide said: "We'll climb the rock, Eph. I mean to try for a shot at that old b'ar if I kin." By dint of hard labor the climb to the summit of the oliff was finishly accomplished.

As the pair stood resting on their rifies. the growl of an angry bear was heard. Not fifty feet from them was seen the bear. The shagy brute was standing upright, with arms outstretched asi if to welcome the hunters. The bear's yellow tusks showed in sharp relief against the dull red lining of her heavy jaws. Close to the intrinsted animal stood a withered pine tree, up the trunk of which the two diminutive cubs of the bear had dambered at the first note of alarm. Involuntarily the hunters drew back a pace. The situation was indeed a rious. Behind the hunters, as they faced their quarry, descended a precipice of hundreds of feet, while in front of them was the angry bear, for whom also all retreat was cut off by the gigantic cliffs behind her and the pair of hunters in front of her.

"Fire after I do, my boy," said Deutcher, as he raised his gun to his shoulder preparatory to firing. Du Bois, trembling with excitement, this being his first encounter with a bear, started to raise his weapon, which was unfortunately exploded by the trigger's catching in a small bush that grew mear the spot where he was standing. The report of the gun hed scarcely died away, and the smoke had not yet quite cleared, when the bear advanced with a rush upon the two men. Deutcher, who had failed to keep the bear wall covered with his rifle, had a hurried glimpso of the huge form of the bear, and, staking aim as best he could, fired. At almost the same instant the bear was upon the mon, but by a clever dodge the old lunter managed to escape the animal's claws, and, getting a few feet away, hurried, and getting a few feet away, hurried, and getting a few feet away, lurried, and getting a few feet away, lurried glimpso of the bear caused her partially to turn, and as she did so a second shot from the bear caused her partially to turn, and as she did s

Our I's and Other Eyes.

Our I's are just as strong as they were fifty years ago, when we have cause to use them. But we have less and less cause to praise carselves, since others do the praising, and we are more than willing for you to see us through other eyes. This is how we look to S. F. Boyce, whole-sale and retail druggist, Duluth, Minn., who after a quarter of a century of observation writes:

"I have sold Ayur's Sarsaparilla for more than 25 years, both at whole-sale and retail, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. I believe Ayer's Sarsaparilla has ever reached me. I believe Ayer's Sarsaparilla to be the best blood putfiler that has been introduced to the general public." This, from a man who has sold thousands of dozens of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is strong testimony. But it only echoes popular sentiment the world over, which has "Notthing but words of praise for Ayer's Sarsaparilla."
