VINEGAR AS AN ANTIDOTE TO CARBOLIC ACID.—Applied to the skin or mucous membrane burnt by carbolic acid, vinegar causes a rapid disappearance of the characteristic whiteness, as well as the numbness produced by the acid; it also prevents the formation of a slough. Vinegar also neutralises carbolic acid introduced into the stomach. In cases where carbolic acid has been swallowed, therefore, Professor Carleton suggests, the patient should be made to drink vinegar diluted with an equal quantity of water, and the stomach should then be washed out.—Practitioner.

The Microbe Pathology.—Phila. Ledger. It is a sad time for medical art and for the sick when physicians turn from the study of individual patients to the investigation of disease as an abstract condition, forgetting that every disease is profoundly modified in its type and issue by the peculiarities of the persons in whom it occurs. Of the many evils begotten of this error, a very serious one is that it tends to impair a physician's sense of responsibility, and, therefore, lessen that anxious vigilance which he should never suspend while the issues of life and death are in his hands. At the same time the patients of a physician who appears to have little faith in his own powers soon tend to lose their faith in him. It is through faith alone that innumerable cures are wrought, cures that have even been called miraculous.

We desire to draw special attention to the high encomiums of Dr. Playter's recent book, from the medical press and eminent physicians; and also to his Sanatorium for cases of incipient phthisis, heart disease, rheumatism, neuroses, etc., on page xx of advertisements, etc.
