Native silver was found in a stringer of soft calcite in the big shaft in the Columbus Cobalt Mine a few days ago. The stringer proved to be an offshoot from the main vein, running out at three-quarter right angle. The samples produced are most beautiful. This find only proves that the many predictions made by some of the best mining men, that the Columbus would become a wonderful producer of high grade ore, are now being realized. The shaft is mow about 100 feet deep and 24 feet from the big vein. The cross-cut to the vein will soon be started. Once it reaches the vein drifts on the vein will be run both ways from the cross-cut.
