"The Girl from Vagabondia."

Seats are on sale this morning at the Princess Theatre for next week's production of the first all Canadian musical comedy ever written, "The Girl from Vagabondia." The entire play bears the stamp of "Made in Canada"; the author, Wilson MacDonald, is a Canadian; the production has been built in the studios of the meatre, and the artists playing the principal roles are all born in Canada professionals, while the chorus, one of the largest seen in a local stage, have been selected from the different musical conservatories of Toronto. Musically, the piece is one of the brightest ever heard, arrangements having already been made for the reproduction of the different song and dance numbers by one of the largest record manufacturers in the world. The records will be released at an early date. There will only be one matinee, that of Saturday.

"The Light That Failed."

For the closing week of the English Players' engagement at the Grand Opera House, commencing Monday next, this talented organization will present. Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson's great success, "The Light That Failed," the noted dramatization of Rudyard Kipling's famous story. That the play will be given an adequate production and interpretation goes without saying, for it will be in the hands of one of the most able companies that has ever appeared in Toronto, The principal roles will be portrayed by such artists as Harry Lonsdale, Frederick Ross, Norman Cannon, J. Joynson-Powell, Bert Randall, Hilliard Vax, Peggy Bryett, Millicent Hallatt and Dorothy Reeve. The sale of seats is now open.

"Lying Hips" at Regent and Strand.

Some pictures take a year to produce, but when they are completed they are of a quality, well, a character to justify their presentation simultaneously at the Regent and the Strand Theatres. "Lying Lips," a Thomas H. Ince production, with House Peters and Florence Vidor in the leading roles, is one of these, and it will be shown all next week at both the Regent and the Strand Theatres. No stronger elements of passion and emotion exist than are translated by the words, "life" and "love," and lit's to interpret these that "Lying Lips" ward in fervent search for the gates which lead to a paradise of eternal life and love, House Peters is one of the few sersen actors of today who could successfully portray the role of Blair Cernwall, in the thrilling story of "Lying Lips," which was adapted from the pen of May Edington. The type revealed in the story is that of a rugged, dig-souled, courageous Canadian, unafraid of hardships or adventure. The ordinary screen here, accustomed to doing the usual society or business man role, could not hope to portary the tortion and the Strand next week.

Winifred Hicks-Lyne, one of the most popular and artistic of Toronto's singers, gave a song recital at the Margaret Eaton Hall last night in which she excelled herself, her beautiful soprano voice being heard at its best in her well-arranged program. The occasion was under the distinalleged to have stolen five hens from Elizabeth Gibbon of Fairbank, Ont.

According to the story told by Mrs.
Gibbon, the men came to her home in a delivery wagon, ostensibly to purschase some hens. They asked for five and she produced them, asking $2.50 each. She claims that they threw down a $10 bill, which was $2.50 short of the required amount, and made a hasty exit. She secured the made a hasty exit.
