

Poetry.

From the TOWER, for 1830.

THE BUGLE.

But still the dingle's hollow throat
Prolonged the swelling bugle note;
The owlets started from their dream,
The eagles answered with their scream;
Round and around the sounds were sent,
Till echo seemed an answering blast.
(Lady of the Lake.)

Oh! wild, enchanting horn!
Whose music up the deep and dewy air,
Swells the clouds, and calls an Echo there,
Till a new melody is born!

Wake, wake again! the night
Is bounding from her throne of beauty down,
With still stars burning on her azure crown,
Intense, and eloquently bright!

Night, as its pulseless noon!
When the far voice of waters mourns in song,
And some tired watch-dog lazily and long
Barks at the melancholy mora!

Hark! how it sweeps away,
Soaring and dying on the silent sky,
As if some spirit of sound went wandering by,
With lone halloo and roundelay!

Swirl, swirl in glory out!
Thy tones come pouring on my leaping heart,
And my stirred spirit hears thee with a start,
As boyhood's old, remembered shout.

Oh! have ye heard that peal
From sleeping city's moon-bathed battlements,
Or from the guarded field, and warrior tents,
Like some near breath around you steal?

Or have ye in the roar
Of sea, or storm, or battle, heard it rise,
Shriller than eagle's clamor, to the skies,
Where winds and tempests never cease?

Go, go—no other sound,
No music that of air or earth is born,
Can match the mighty music of that horn,
On midnight's falchion profound!

EARLY NOTICE OF THE USE OF TEA BY THE CHINESE.—The Arabian traveller, Wahab, who visited China in the ninth century, speaking of the revenues of the empire, says, "The Emperor reserves to himself the revenues arising from the salt-mines, and from a certain herb which the people drank with hot water, and of which such quantities were sold in all the cities as produced enormous sums." This shrub, called tah by the Chinese, was more bushy than the pomegranate tree, and of a more agreeable perfume. The people poured boiling water on the leaf of the tah, and drank the decoction, which was thought to be efficacious in curing all sorts of diseases."
