HARD WORK TO SAVE TIMBER

More Than $1,250,000 Loss Already from Fires in British Columbia.

Victoria, B. C., July 8.—(Canadian Press).—More than $1,250,000 worth of standing timber in British Columbia had been destroyed by forest fires up to yesterday, according to official figures.

Logging operators were in session here yesterday discussing how to save the valuable timber from destruction. All logging operations may be suspended in the province because of the fires sweeping the timber areas.

A forty mile gale which swept through the Nanaimo district at Merville, Campbell River and Menaies Point districts, Vancouver Island, since yesterday morning will add enormously to the total loss, so today's reports indicate.

Logging camps at Langbay, where 1,000 men were employed, were destroyed by fire that practically destroyed the village. The camps are on the mainland, south of Powell River.

Airplanes are being used in shipping supplies to the fire fighters. The fire fighters have been in action steady for two weeks. Many logging camps have shut down and turned all their employees into the fighting line.

Logging on the northern half of Vancouver Island gained new impetus last night, when the Comox fire joined the one burning out of Menasies Bay and swept forward to wreck destruction on timber areas hitherto untouched. Weather forecasts are for continued dry weather. Logging railways are burned out in several places.

Late arrivals from Langbay, which was practically wiped out on Thursday night, say that families there are homeless and destitute.

NEW BRUNSWICK HEALTH LAWS

Significance of Rockefeller Foundation Grant

Dr. Roberts Talks of It—This Province a Demonstration Area—Evil Effects of Partisanship—Public Health Nurses.

The Times sought from Hon. Dr. Roberts, minister of health, yesterday, some further information regarding the grant made by the Rockefeller Foundation and the present status of New Brunswick health laws.

Dr. Roberts said that the government had completed their steps to make recalcitrant municipalities pay what they owed to their respective health boards. At the present time the counties of Sunbury, Kings, Queens, Albert, Kent and Northumberland were behind with their payments. The law compels the secretary-treasurer of the municipality to pay, he can pay out of any monies that he happens to have, and the law gives him authority to borrow if need be. On Thursday night the government proceeded to grant money at an order that the attorney for the health department proceed at once with attachment proceedings. The doctor added that just as the various municipalities paid over the money, the health work of the province will be on a proper working basis.

Dr. Roberts said that he was charged by the opposition that the health programme was his fad, and was an unnecessary expenditure. His answer to that was that any man who is not a doctor and who has not been approved of, and spoken well of, but a great deal of the matter contained therein had been copied by other provinces and by some states of the union. He said that the uniqueness of the act lay in the fact that it not only deals in general sanitation, which includes the prevention of tuberculosis, venereal diseases, child welfare work and mental hygiene, but there has been incorporated in the act the service of vital statistics, its collection and compilation, which is a foundation upon which a public health service rests or is erected. He went on to say that New Brunswick was the first province to have such a programme, as generally vital statistics are a service of government carried out by such officials as county secretaries and laymen. Under the new plan there is a collection of statistics in every parish, sometimes with assistants. Last March a telegram from Ottawa announced that New Brunswick was foremost in the collection of statistics in every parish, sometimes with assistants. Last March a telegram from Ottawa announced that New Brunswick was foremost in the collection of statistics in every parish, sometimes with assistants.

There is also included in the act, the act in America, said the doctor, the medical inspection under the health act. This matter, concerning the mental and physical status of the child, was formerly left with the educational authorities. Medical inspection, he said, represents about half of the health budget for the rural municipality. Finding opposition in some of the rural municipalities to the great expense and to the great army of officials as compared to the provincial health board existing before 1918, which only attempted to do a part of one service, namely looking after nuisances and unsuccessfully trying to combat epidemics, Dr. Roberts made an effort to see if he could get at least one service from outside the province in some way, the government having done as he felt, their full duty in this regard, having raised the health budget from $1,600 in 1917, to a gross of $61,000 in 1921, this latter amount being reduced by revenue of $15,000 from the laboratory and central office to $46,000; and because of financial stringency, he felt that it would be unfair to ask for further immediate financial assistance. The Rockefeller Foundation International Health Board having set aside $84,000,000 for medical education, more especially as related to public health, and five millions of this having been allotted to Canada, Dr. Roberts made application for assistance. This began, he said, two and one half years ago, during which time he presented two or three different plans for their consideration. They have sent three different special representatives to make a survey of the work of the health department, and on each occasion he felt that they could not include New Brunswick as one of the beneficiaries under the gift, because, technically, the money was being given to medical universities, and only New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island were without these. This spring when the doctor visited the Foundation, he presented to them strongly the fact that New Brunswick had built up a wonderful service from practically nothing to what it is today, and that in New Brunswick we are doing the very work which they are giving monies to other provinces for the purpose of educating them to do.

The doctor laid before the board the difficulties that he was having among several of the municipal councils and told them he felt that if this was not overcome, that it might result materially in retarding the wonderful work which has thus far been accomplished, and he made the suggestion that if ever there was an opportunity for a philanthropic organization to grant money at a time when it would promote and conserve the vital interests of public health, then that opportunity was in New Brunswick and at this particular time.

The doctor said he presented another proposition, supposed to be one that the board was in sympathy with, namely the carrying on of health centres in the city of St. John, but this only called for an expenditure of $10,000. When the doctor was leaving, both Dr. Vincent and Dr. Rose, with whom he was conferring, intimated to him that they would like very much to do something for New Brunswick, for they felt that the province was deserving, but the medical school inspection plan was not a part of their general policy, and to conform to that their board would not be willing to do. They assured the doctor, however, that the health centre scheme would doubtless go through.

The International Health Board, constituted as it is, of twelve of the leading educationalists of America, the majority of whom are public health specialists, held a meeting on May 23. Recognizing the character that had been observed in so short a time, they decided to step aside from the principle of the plan of medical school inspection advanced by the doctor, namely the payment to New Brunswick of $20,000 per annum for two years, with the understanding that the government would continue to carry on this service as a government service, at the end of the two years.

This said the doctor, will relieve the rural municipalities of over fifty per cent health budget, which, he said, should result in greater co-operation on the part of the municipalities who do not understand that to use monies in the prevention of disease and the removal of the physical and mental difficulties is not an expenditure but an investment. We would not want and would not have the provincial health legislation administered in their county, but at a recent election there the health department was one of the principal issues and there was not one word from the beginning to the end against it by the constituents that gathered from time to time at public meetings. The minister feels satisfied that the greater part of the opposition was created and maintained by some councillors of the municipalities who failed to comply with the requirements. Further than this, said the minister, and quite naturally so, for the last two years, the county councils who received the requests of their boards and paid their amounts without hesitation, when they saw other counties not paying, and the programme still being carried out, did not consider it fair to have to continue paying, and this spirit became contagious, with the result that today all counties are in the same position. Therefore, he said, the decision of the government at its recent meeting to carry out the spirit of the last amendment to the new letter.

While the minister admits that during the last two and one half years he has spent a great deal of time and energy in getting the Rockefeller people interested in the New Brunswick proposition, he said today that he could not but feel grateful to the Rockefeller people for having made it possible to accept the principle and give to New Brunswick, in place of a part time, medical service, a necessarily inefficient service, one which above all others, should be as possible and efficient as possible, and by six men specially trained for medical school inspection work, who will be on duty from January 1 to December 31, and whose professional lives will be lived in the interests of New Brunswick's future citizens. Efforts are being made, he said, to interest public health nurses, to interest certain voluntary organizations to a sufficient extent to provide public health nurses for the several districts, in which they would be all-time medical inspectors who will carry on their work.

The minister considers that the anticipated grant by the Rockefeller foundation to be the greatest compliment among the many that have been paid to the status of public health in the province, because of the fact that the gentlemen who Mr. Rockefeller selected to administer the $84,000,000 are not men who would expend $54,000 for other than a sound business proposition.

"I believe that it is but the dawning of the day that will set forth New Brunswick as a demonstration area in the public health world. I have reason to believe that if this $54,000 is properly administered, that we will not have seen the last of the Rockefeller philanthropy along these lines."

THE FITZPATRICK CASE

Sackville Post.—The men who served on the jury in this unfortunate case were not the friends and neighbors of the dead man, and probably the majority of them had never before heard of the guard.

Under the circumstances their sympathies would hardly be aroused in favor of the officer. And yet it is well to remember these men after hearing all the evidence in the case brought in a verdict exonerating the man who did the shooting. If they could do this knowing all the facts of the case, it is fair for a newspaper published 150 miles away to stir up public feeling against an officer who was only doing his duty as he understood it.

HALIFAX WAR MEMORIAL

Halifax Recorder.—At the Commercial Club luncheon yesterday the subject as to the form and character which the proposed War Memorial for Halifax should take was discussed. Dr. Macgillivray, secretary of the War Memorial Committee, presented. He said: The question of the erection of an arch to cost in the vicinity of $50,000 had met with most favorable consideration. Professor John E. Keed especially urged the erection of a Memorial Library. Mr. J. E. McLurg presented the case for a Memorial Arch, suggesting it should be of Halifax County granite and could be erected at the Willow Tree, now the centre of population, and should be provided for by general assessment. Dean Lloyd spoke strongly in behalf of the memorial pure and simple. His preference was for a group of statuary.
