Concentration Against Fort La Pompelle Meets Sanguinary Set-back—Plucky Work by French Under Horrible Gas Bombardment

Grand Headquarters of the French Army in France, Mar. 8.—(By the Associated Press)—Determined efforts by the Germans to obtain possession of Fort La Pompelle, in the southeast of Rheims, and thus secure another dominating position from which they could complete the destruction of the city, have met with a sanguinary failure.

The preparations for the attack began on Feb. 29 along a front extending nearly ten miles, from Lorraine to Belgium. The German infantry on the following day went over the top at five points, advancing toward the salient facing Neu-Chateau, La Pompelle, La Bestonnerie, Mont Haant and Toton, at the same time making a feint in the neighborhood of Betheny.

It was soon seen that the principal point of assault was La Pompelle, to which two battalions tried to force their way. Some of the Germans succeeded in reaching Alger Farm, a fortified point on the front of the salient (La Pompelle); but none were able to enter the fort.

A French counter-attack quickly restored the line to its original position, and not an inch of French lines now remains in German hands. The French regiment holding the position was one which had already won distinction on other battle fronts. It held tenaciously under a horrible bombardment, in which thousands of gas shells mixed the air deadly poisonous. Some of its men who were taken prisoners successfully eluded the captors, and the aspirant leader of the French line in a shell crater where they found a large supply of hand grenades. With these they held off the Germans who were endeavoring to recapture them, and eventually returned to the French lines.

An assault on the fort was captured, and he carried a stretcher with a German casualty. His fellow bearer fell wounded, and the aspirant leader of the French line in a shell crater where they found a large supply of hand grenades. With these they held off the Germans who were endeavoring to recapture them, and eventually returned to the French lines.

Now Is American Front

Washington, Mar. 4.—Continued preparatory movements on the part of the army movements on the western front are noted by the war department in its review of the military situation for the week ended March 2. "The momentum of battle is increasing," the statement declares, "and the lines held by American troops as an example of what is taking place on a larger scale along the entire western front."

On French Lines

Paris, Mar. 4.—(Delayed)—Following is the official statement of the afternoon: "The artillery fighting was spirited at times on the right bank of the Meuse and in the Woëvre, in the regions of Domèvre and Badouville. In Upper Alsace the enemy's artillery, which has been repelled energetically, violently bombarded our lines north of the Rhoncourt Canal in the afternoon."

With the American Army in France

Mar. 4.—Between 800 and 1,000 gas shells are thrown on the American position on the Chemin des Dames front each day, but there have been no serious gas casualties there. The men have been trained thoroughly in the use of gas masks and the necessity of putting them on before going into the trenches. A few men have been gassed slightly while adjusting their helmets, but this is inevitable when gas shells are thrown a long distance behind the lines.

A LIQUOR CASE

A man named H. Donahue was before Magistrate Ritchie in the police court this afternoon charged with having liquor in his room in the Walker building in Canterbury street on March 3. He is pleaded not guilty. Inspector Crawford testified as to visiting the room No. 8 last night in the company of the three defendants. Ten cans of Jamaica rum were seized. Upon inquiry it was found that Donahue rented that room. At this point of the testimony the Donahue interrupted and said that there was some mistake and that he had given up the room. Thomas Larkins, Junior, said that Donahue had gone about two months ago.
