Fables On Health

BEGIN AT HOME.

"TALKING OF house flies and foods," remarked Mr. Mann, "do you remember that fruit store we saw down on Main street last fall?"

"Well, if that fellow starts out this season as he did the last, by leaving his fruit uncovered to catch all the dust and all the flies and bees, I am going to call upon the board of health and see if something can't be done."

"A man who doesn't know anything about caring for the health of his customers, should be taught. And if he cares nothing about the health of his customers, he should be run out of business."

"All right, go after him," encouraged Mrs. Mann.

"But I think, if I were you, I would have our backyard cleaned up of all the old cans. Rain water in tin cans is a good place for breeding mosquitoes."

"Also that old stable, heaped full of rubbish, is a good place for flies to breed."

"All right," replied Mr. Mann. "I'll arrange to have that done before another week, at the most."

LONG LIES ON DRESS

A blue serge dress, beltless and very plain as to line, has white collars and cuffs of pique and long ties of American beauty and purple taffeta.

Since velvet was so smart for winter it is not surprising to find velvet suits stressed for spring.

Adventures of the Twins

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON.

Nimble ack brought the news back fairman as they went along. "It has only helped him to get away. I should have left it at home. Why, what's this?"

"Snitcher Snatcher is gone," he cried. "He had the magic aeroplane hidden in a button-ball tree and he took it and flew off."

No one needed to answer that question for it was as plain as the nose on the snitcher's face—what it was.

It was the magic aeroplane itself lying on the ground in front of them. There it was, safe and sound, all by itself, not a chick or child near it—certainly not a goblin with a long nose.

"Well, for goodness sake!" cried Mister Whizz. "Will you please never stop happening? Now, why do you suppose that racial left my aeroplane here? And why didn't he—"

Suddenly Nancy saw something. "There's a note!" she exclaimed. "It's planned on one side."

"Dear Mister Whizz and the Twins: Some of the magic snuff got up my nose and I can't do anything now—but sneeze. All I can do with this old machine is to make it turn somersaults. So take it and keep it and welcome. I don't need it anyway. My long legs are enough even if they are crooked. I'm not going to let you have the snuff box until I am through with it. I don't care if the Fairy Queen did give it to her uncle for his birthday. Goblins can only have fun when they are doing something they shouldn't. I can't help it if I'm a goblin. Catch me if you can. Yours in haste,

"Snitcher Snatcher."

"Where do you suppose he has gone?" said Nancy looking around.

"Are you looking for someone?" asked a voice close by.

And then the travelers noticed something they hadn't seen before. Their old friend, the beanstalk, stretching to the sky. It was the little green beanstalk fairy talking. There he was, stretching out of one of the windows of his tiny green house.

"Yes, we're looking for Snitcher Snatcher," said Nick.

To Be Continued.

Summer Frock That's Smart

HERE is the summer frock reduced absolutely to its simplest terms—a chemise frock of printed silk, with a simple roll collar finished with long scarf ends. It may thus be worn closed or open at the throat.

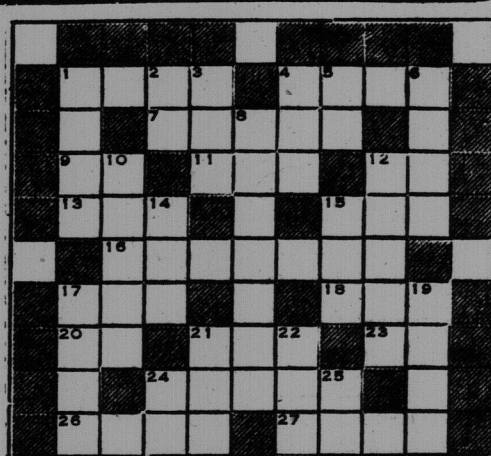

A gushing society lady said to the famous but meticulous novelist—"Well dear Mr. Henry James, and what is your opinion of life?"

He answered with his characteristic slowness and pomposity of speech—"madam—if—ah—so I may call you—I—ah—the predicament which precedes death."

Intense Heat! —fast Cooking!

NOT least of the remarkable points about McClary's Gas Range is the full constant flow of intense heat that comes from the burners. This makes cooking fast—nearly twice as fast as with wood or coal—without fuss, muss or trouble.

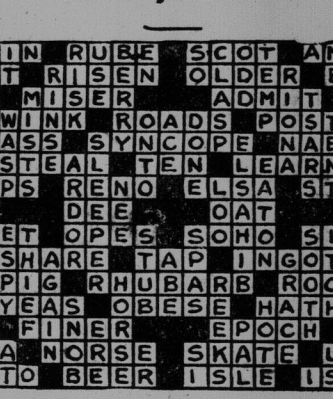

Other features which housewives prize in McClary's Gas Range are:

- The porcelain enameled top, rust proof and sanitary.
- The porcelain enameled oven, so easily cleaned and kept sweet.
- Unbreakable Pyrex glass in oven doors with thermometer to regulate cooking.

These are just a few of the qualities which have made McClary's known as the satisfactory Gas Range.
