Copy of a Despatch from Lord John Russell to the Right Honourable C. Poulett Thomson.

Downing Street, 14th Oct. 1839.

Sur—It appears from Sir George Arthur's Despatches that you may encounter much difficulty in subduing the excitement which prevails on the question of what is called "Responsible Government. I send with excitement which prevails on the question of what is called "Responsible Government. I send with an advance one in the petitions and addresses upon this subject. I cannot better commence this Despatch than by a reference to the resolutions of both Houses of Parliament, of the 23th April and 9th of May, in the year 1837.

The Assembly of Lower Canada having repeated by pressed this point, Her Majesty's confidential advisors at that period thought it necessary not only to saxplain their views in the communications of the Secretary of State, but expressly called for the opinion of Parliament on the subject. The Crown and the two Houses of Lords and Commons having this decisively pronounced a judgment upon the question, you will comsider yourself precladed from entertaining any proposition on the subject. It does not appear, indeed, that any wery definite manning is generally agreed upon by those who call themselves the advocates of this principle but if the communication of the processing of the great political Heresiarch, Lord John.—He apprehends from Six George Arthur's despatches, that Mr. Ponlett Thomson may have trouble on the score of the so great political Heresiarch, Lord John.—He apprehends from Six George Arthur's despatches, that Mr. Ponlett Thomson may have trouble on the score of the so good to be delayed.

The constitution of England, after long struggles and alternate success, has settled into a form of government in which the prerogative of the Crown is consistent on the contracted which a device of delaying and thus remarks, its vagueness is a source of delaying. Here and the matter and subject. T
