

at the Privy Council Office, graciously facilitated my access to Cabinet records. Corrinne Miller greatly assisted my work in the archives of the Bank of Canada.

Ted Kelly, who assumes the position of assistant editor with this volume, edited the chapters on the United Nations and Europe. At every stage in the project, he was a source of helpful advice. Christopher Cook continued as my principal research assistant, locating lost documents and hidden files with enthusiasm. His work was supplemented by the efforts of Joseph McHattie. Boris Stipernitz also helped with the research, compiled the index and searched the text for typographical errors.

Steve Prince reviewed the material on the Korean Conflict and saved me from at least one embarrassing mistake. Angie Sauer was invariably available to discuss the broader Cold War context in which Canada's foreign policy evolved. Norman Hillmer and Hector Mackenzie assisted with sound and practical counsel. John Hilliker, the general editor of Documents on Canadian External Relations, played a large and constructive role in determining the evolving nature of this series and this volume. The series would not be possible without the continuing support of the director of the Corporate Communications Division, Simon Wade. I remain solely responsible for the final selection of documents in this volume.

The Historical Section continues to provide the supplementary text and coordinate the technical preparation of the volume. The manuscript was typed and formatted by Aline Gélinau. Gabrielle Nishiguchi located most of the photographs in this volume. Bruce Williams and Gayle Fraser also helped in my search for photographs. The department's translation bureau provided the French for the footnotes, captions and ancillary text. Francine Fournier and Nancy Sample, colleagues in the Corporate Communications Division, provided editorial guidance. Gail Kirkpatrick Devlin proofread the entire manuscript and composed the list of persons. In this latter task, she was assisted by Michael Stevenson. Finally and happily, Mary and Katherine Donaghy continued their close association with this documentary project.

GREG DONAGHY