

Carleton Place

VOL. XV.

CARLETON PLACE, C. V., FEBRUARY 1 1865.

No. 20.

In Memoriam.
To Mrs. Murray, on the sudden death of an only child, beloved son.
Sad, bending o'er the newly dead,
Weep on, heart-broken mother weep,
Nature demands the tears you shed
O'er the cold clay, in that last sleep,
But mourn not, all of hope bereft
"A joy in grief" for this is left.

There's light beyond the darkest cloud
That ever veil'd the summer skies;
The form enfolded in your shroud,
From death's embrace shall yet arise
Far above earth's confines dim
To swell the choir of Cherubim.

Though dear to thee, and justly dear
To all who knew his noble worth,
He claims the tribute of a tear
From Canada, who gave him birth—
His loss is hers—not ours alone,
Had years but made his name known.

He might have won the world's applause,
A name among his fellow men;
Stood foremost in his country's cause,
To wield the sword, or guide the pen—
To lead her senate—and increase
Her rising power in war or peace.

Vain were our hopes! and vain this sad regret,
The very core and bitterness of grief—
To think his noon-day sun so early set—
The green tree withered in its first green leaf—
Hush! the deep murmur, bury in your breast
All but the loving hope "He is at rest."

Short-sighted mortals, bound by sense,
"Tis not for us God's ways to scan,
Question the love that summoned hence
What might have proved a good, great man;
His hand in mercy dealt the blow
That laid our proudest wishes low.

Mother—wouldst thou recall thy son
To tread this mournful earth once more?
A English knightly he has won,
E'er youth's delightful spring was o'er—
"Ashesto ashes—dust to dust,"
Mere words to those who love and trust.

His spirit lives—and lives forever—
Fed by the fruit of life's fair tree,
Death but removes—it cannot sever
That young and loving heart from thee—
Unseen he hovers at thy side—
Speaks to thy soul, an angel guide.

MURRAY MOORE,
Belleville, Jan. 1st, 1865.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE.
The operation of transferring the cable from the factory of East Greenwich to the hulk Amethyst and Iris has not yet begun, but, if all should go well, the preparations for this important step in the great enterprise may be concluded before New Year's day. Powerful machinery, by which some fourteen miles of the "core," or gutta-percha-covered copper wire, are worked up into the cable every day, is not the most important agency; for the tools of material, during manufacture, undergo the trial of those exquisite instruments by which the man of science bends watchfully hour after hour, ready not only to detect a fault, but to apprise the engineers at what exact distance in the cable it has occurred. Moreover, the necessity of guarding against every slight inadvertence, every possible act of mischief, is enforced by the most perfect vigilance exercised within the walls of a factory. The personal characters of all the workmen, and of the persons employed to cart the large coils of core from the gutta-percha works in the City Road to East Greenwich, are the objects of rigid inquiry. In fact, in no other part of the cable is so much care taken to identify with the name of the workman responsible for that part of the work. The covering for the core is fabricated from iron wire and Manila yarn, which is afterwards twisted in a section composed of iron and gutta-percha. If a section of the perfect cable is examined, it will be found to measure an inch and one-eighth in diameter, the seven conducting wires lying close together in the middle. They are surrounded by layers of gutta-percha, the rings of which may be faintly discerned, though they form a solid and substantial homogeneous coating, about a sixth of an inch thick. In the section we shall further perceive that the core is surrounded by a close mass, more than a quarter of an inch thick, in which are ten round spots of metal; in other words, the sectional ends of ten iron wires. In fact, the protecting mass will be found to consist of ten closely twisted strands of the soaked Manila yarn, each strand having iron wire in the middle. It is at the separate factory, some hundreds of yards from the closing and jolting machinery at Morden Wharf, that this covering is manufactured, fifty tons of the iron being used every week, in combination with Manila yarn at the rate of 65 tons per day. The wire is received in coils from Birmingham, and, having been allowed, is stored until wanted; then it is joined very carefully by warmed ends, or, in case of any defect in the cable being worked, the machinery by which the Manila yarn is twisted round the wire is very ingenious, each machine being a long horizontal shaft or spindle, with alternate discs of perforated iron and bobbins of the gold-colored yarn. In one set of machines the axis of the bobbins is parallel to or identical with the spindle, and the revolution is the same in rapidity as the fixed iron disc; but in the improved series of mechanism above alluded to, the arrangement is altered, the bobbins being set transversely with the shaft, and revolving very much more slowly. It is indeed a curious and rather perplexing sight to observe the difference in the two motions, the discs whirling so rapidly as to render almost invisible the threads of yarn passed eccentrically through the holes, while each thread unwinds itself in the coolest and most leisurely way from the bobbins. These machines will each turn out 140 miles of Manila-covered wire in a day. As it is twisted it goes through the hot solution above mentioned, and is then passed through a trough of water to cool it. These little details must be noted by the visitor by way of his own eyes; for, during the time of his being inside this factory his power of distinguishing the sounds of the human voice, even if conveyed in a shout is in abeyance. At the Morden Wharf factory another stage of operations is commenced. Here the core is received on large reels, and is sunk in circular openings, which are then filled up with water. From first to last the cable is in the process of formation at this factory kept in water, this any day in the cooling may be more quickly be made apparent. For twelve hours the coils of core are subjected to electrical tests, their sensitivity being ascertained and their complete isolation proved beyond a doubt. Malicious injury to the core, in its transit from the gutta-percha works to Morden Wharf, would thus be detected in its purpose by prompt detection and remedy. The joining of the ends is about the most delicate operation in the whole course of manufacturing the Atlantic or any other telegraph cable; and whenever the electrician proclaims a faulty transmission of the current, the chances are a hundred to one that the flaw will be found in one of the joints. Before being worked into cable with the ten strands of wire and yarn, the core is wrapped in a twisted fold of jute, which may be just distinguishable in one of those sections that we have already alluded to. The machinery by which the cable is twisted occupies two floors. The closing machines are below, and they consist of large wheels or tables, revolving horizontally, with reels of margin as to maintain a relatively stationary position, instead of always keeping their axis pointed to the motion. The strands, converging upward towards a small opening in the roof, meet, and are twisted round the jute covered core, and so form the entire cable, which is conducted over grooved wheels to another and very noteworthy department. A visit to the apparatus of this place, where platforms of iron, steel, and oak, or what would be called a "cable" and four oval. The roof is 34 feet in diameter, and the oval is 36 feet by 27. Their depth is 12 feet and they are intended as receptacles for the cable, which descends into them from the wheels overhead, and is coiled very neatly by manual labor. Each tank will conveniently hold 140 miles of the cable, but their capacity, if taxed to the utmost, would be greater by some ten miles or more. A stream of water constantly falls over the top of each tank, and percolates the coils of cable, finds its way into an open space level with the coil. The water tests the efficiency of the protecting covering, and the delicately adjusted batteries in the electrician's room, into which the ends of all the cables are led into one bunch, prove the conducting power to be unimpaired by any penetration from without. A measured force is being continually sent through the wires, and the least defect in the insulation can thus be registered with unfailing accuracy, even to its exact distance and degree. Hitherto the experiments of this nature have been very fortunate; but it has sometimes happened that a great length of cable has had to be uncoiled, the defective joint cut out, and the whole made good. The distance from the west coast of Ireland to Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, is 1,640 nautical miles. Two of the eight tanks are nearly full, and will soon be ready for embarkation by the Amethyst and Iris, two ghostly-looking hulks, which lay alongside, near the wharf. The decks of these vessels have been knocked about considerably, and in great part got rid of to make room for tanks in which the cable will be stored in the same manner as at the factory. The hulks when laden, will be towed to the Medway, where the Great Eastern is now lying, with three enormous tanks on board, occupying, by comparison with the surrounding bulk, so little space as to be almost unperceived eyes to their actual dimensions. The Iris and the Amethyst have each two tanks on board, the diameter of which is somewhat less than those of Morden Wharf, the depth being greater. They will have to make nine miles trips to get all the cable alongside the ship. To make up the 2,300 miles of cable, which, allowing for various contingencies, will be required, 16,000 miles of copper wire will be used. The insulating material is equal to an aggregated length of 18,400 miles; the jute being in ten strands, will extend to 23,000 miles, which will also be the length of the iron wire, and as the wire is separately covered with five twists or strands of yarn, 135,000 miles of the latter will be worked into the cable; making together a length of material which amounts to 237,000 miles. What these figures really signify may be understood by reference to the astronomical fact that the distance of 237,000 miles is that from the earth to the moon.

The Abuse of Asylum.
It has been a very favorite argument with the advocates of the South in Canada, that whereas the Federal people were the essence of blackguardism, the Confederates were the very pink of propriety, strictly chivalrous and honorable men in whose midst history had been guilty of a mean action, who recognized in the very widest sense their obligations, and scorned anything and everything that would look like an attempt to evade them. If, sincere, distance lends a very considerable amount of color to this view. Certainly the conduct of the Confederate refugees here is a very fair sample of the residents of the South—gives it no warrant. Let us note a few incidents in their conduct since they have been in this Province. Canada, a neutral country, afforded them shelter from the arms of the United States. Some of them gained our boundaries after escape from the Federal gaols, after months of hardship, after passing through many dangers; but the moment they put their feet upon our soil, that moment they were safe, and might bid defiance to their pursuers. The whole power of the British Empire was pledged to their protection. They knew it and rejoiced. And how have they repaid us for the obligations they were under? They should have carefully obeyed our laws; they were in honor bound, if they had any honor in them, to strive to observe the neutrality which our monarch had proclaimed; gratitude, if nothing else, should have taught them to abstain from anything which could do us injury, from insult and annoyance. They should have behaved themselves in every respect as gentlemen do when receiving the hospitality of a nation. Yet all these considerations they have cast to the winds; have assumed indeed the very reverse of the position they ought to have taken. The President of the so-called Confederate States taking advantage of our position, deliberately issues orders which involve a breach of our neutrality law, and under the guise of confederate sends either men who plot and perpetrate raids upon our neighbors. The peace that has hitherto prevailed between ourselves and the United States is thus endangered; in order to protect our frontier enormous sums of money have to be spent, a large and lucrative trade is destroyed, and we are threatened with the complete closing up of the market upon which our farmers chiefly depend for the sale of their produce. One would think that, having done as much injury, these Southern gentry would keep quiet. Not they; they appear to think they have come here as detestable, not as refugees. By their manipulations they pervert the course of justice; where they cannot buy they attempt to bully. They and their sympathizers deny free speech to the citizens of Montreal, and the paper which boasts itself their organ loads with opprobrious epithets the most respectable of the inhabitants. Our courts of justice, which we Canadians prize so much with the traditions of British law, strive to keep free from all displays of feeling, that the magistrates may the better discharge the great trust reposed in them, are disgraced with the roars of this alien crowd, who have as little respect for their own feelings as they have regard for their own honor. As it was in Montreal so here it is in Toronto. Seldom or never before have any of our courts been so discredited as during the Barley investigation here. And not content with that, when the de-friend—the robber of Lake Erie, they got up a demonstration to show their contempt alike for the law and law. Ever ready to play their game, their paper here boasts the demonstration; for they know well that such displays, especially if it can be made to appear that the Canadian people join in them, tend to increase that bitterness of feeling in the Northern States which has already wrought us so much and threatens us with much further harm. But what care they for our interests? They seek to involve us in war with the United States, and to that end spare no pains, shrink from no atrocity. The demonstration on Friday night was but a piece with all the proceedings. Utterly regardless of the obligations entailed by their position they would sink us in the ocean, if thereby they could in any way benefit themselves.

There are Canadians here enough to ponder to these men. But, happily, whatever division of opinion may exist about the war, few only endorse their doing here. They are rapidly creating a sentiment of disgust which they will find little to their advantage. Both by their President's and by their own actions they are rapidly depriving themselves of all title to friendly consideration. They repay our kindness with enmity; in return for the protection we have afforded them, they commit acts of hostility. Are they or are the Canadian people to say what position the Province shall take towards the belligerents of the United States? We have elected to be neutral. Shall we be dragged into war? We tell them that we will not, if they think the course they are pursuing is together mistaken in our character. What ever measures may be necessary to preserve our faith will be taken, no matter on whose toes we may tread. We point in the way of warning to that paragraph in the Governor's speech which speaks of strengthening the hands of the Executive by further legislation, and to the declaration in Mr. Gardiner's speech at Oxford. The Alien Act has got to come, for which the Southerners may thank themselves. If they want to strengthen the hands of the Government in measures which may seem necessary, they shall further to assure us for our laws, they will continue in their present course.—(Globe.)

NATURALIZED CITIZENS OF CANADA.
Amid the many vexatious developments out of the passport system now in force one of the most crying evils results from the refusal of the Imperial Government and Ambassador at Washington to recognize the naturalization of aliens by colonial legislation or under forms provided by such legislation. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty, who are now coolly told that they cannot have a passport to go to the United States, and that they are not citizens of the United States. There are men here who have lived in this country for forty or fifty years, who have borne various commissions from Her Majesty