

Entertainment

A Feature
by Roger Doris

Some wonderful things have happened to the dining room at the Sherway Inn. This view shows where the partition has been removed allowing for a large dance floor and window tables overlooking the pool and patio.

When this picture was taken the tables were set banquet style, but at night it is set in an intimate setting. Ken Stanley's Duo appears nightly.

An Evening Out with Roger Doris

room has been removed, making one large dining room with two of the walls having floor to ceiling windows overlooking the pool and patio area. A stage and a dance floor have been added as part of the finishing touches.

The Ken Stanley Duo is appearing nightly from 7 p.m. until 11 p.m. for both diners and dancers. There is one portion of the room set aside for those who may just like to drop in for a cocktail and a few dances.

The exciting news is the menu and the food.

The menu has a variety of dishes including sole, shrimp, lobster, veal, chicken breast, steak and roast beef. The prices are certainly reasonable with full course meals starting at just $4.25 a person. A lovely salad bar is situated on one side of the room with a hot buffet table that has a well-stocked supply of vegetables and roast beef advertised at $6.95 a person.

Otto Koessel, an award-winning chef at many culinary arts competitions, is now the executive chef. Having dined at the Sherway Inn last week, I can truly say that his awards are justified because the food was exceptionally good.

New owners, top entertainment, a top-rate chef and manager, nice decor and a good staff should be ingredients enough to make the Sherway Inn a successful operation and a fine spot for an evening out.
