The Wedding Cake.
The custom of having a special cake at weddings was introduced into England by the Romans. This cake, or rather, biscuit, signified fruitfulness, hospitality and prosperity. The rice that was showered upon a bride had a similar meaning. For many centuries after the Romans left the custom was to break the biscuit over the bride's head, and then the fragments were distributed to her friends. At the restoration Charles II. returned with a small army of French cooks, who speedily converted the ancient biscuit into a delicious piece of confectionery, laced it with sugar and gradually adorned it with emblematical devices, till it towered into the amazing structure which the luxury of later times has developed.—London Chronicle.

Hither and Yon.

"Hither and yon," inveighed against as a Yankee importation, is simply a form of "hither and yon," a good, classical Scotch expression and a most useful one, signifying "here and there and everywhere" or "all over the place."

It is thus defined in Jamieson: "Hither and yon, topsy turvy, in a state of disorder. S. yon signifies beyond, hither and yon, A. B. C., here and there. 'Noo that they're hither and yon frae ane-anither it behooves a' that wish them weel to tak tent that a branch is no opened that canna be gigit up.'" (Sir A. Wylie, 2, 20.)

Skeat does not give it, but Halliwell, who deals with English provincial dialects, gives "hither and yon, here and there."—Notes and Queries.

SPECIALISM IN LAW.

The Solicitor and the Barrister in Our Legal Practice.

In this country nearly every student admitted to the bar is under the impression that there is in him the more than possibility of a great trial lawyer. Having read accounts of brilliant cross examinations and successful addresses to juries, he has in mind that he is entirely competent at the outset to try the most complicated and difficult cause. Unfortunately as to many who are not qualified for that work it is only after very many years and after considerable experience at the expense of litigants and the public, it is at all, that they ascertain that they have not the peculiar aptitude necessary to the successful trial lawyer. In the meantime not only have clients suffered, but the business of the courts has been retarded to a very serious extent by the lack of adaptability on the part of the practitioner as well as by lack of experience, since it is impossible that every man admitted to the bar shall have the opportunity to try a sufficient number of causes to give him the degree of experience requisite in order to obtain the best results.

Sooner or later in the interest of the clients and to save the time and patience of the courts there must be in this country a natural division between the labor of the solicitor and the duty of the barrister, not artificial or conventional, but one which shall grow up from the nature of the case, by which certain men who are best qualified for the trial of causes will carry on that work to the practical exclusion of those without special adaptability for that class of business. In this, as in every other direction specialist must find his place.

MALIBRAN WAS A TEASE.

The Great Prima Donna Was Full of Mischief and Caprice.

No prima donna was ever more delightfully capricious, more full of mischief, than the famous Mme. Malibran. At the rehearsal of "Romeo and Juliet" she could never make up her mind where she was to "die" at night. It was important for "Romeo" to know, but all he could get was "not sure," "don't know," "can't tell," or "it will be just as it happens, according to my humor; sometimes in one place, sometimes in another." On one occasion she chose to "die" close to the footlights, her companion, of course, being compelled to "die" beside her, and thus, when the curtain fell, a couple of footmen had to carry the pair off, one at a time, to the intense amusement of the audience.

John Templeton, the fine old Scottish tenor, was probably never so miserable as when he was cast to sing with Malibran. Very often she was displeased with his performance, and one evening she whispered to him, "You are not acting properly; make love to me better," to which, so it is said, Templeton innocently replied, "Don't you know I am a married man?" Evidently the lady did not think there was anything serious in the circumstance, for not long afterward, when in "Sommambula" she was on her knees to Templeton as Elvino, she succeeded in making the tenor scream with suppressed laughter when he should have been singing by tickling him vigorously under the arms.

Glass Windows.

Glass windows are known to have existed at Pompeii as early as A. D. 79. In the third century the windows of royal houses throughout Europe were glazed. Windows of colored glass were placed in many French and Italian churches in 674, and the use of glass became general in private houses during the twelfth century. The panes, however, were only three or four inches square, and the material was so inferior that, while a room was lighted, it was often a matter of some difficulty to discern objects on the outside through the glass. For a long time windows in England were a subject of taxation.

Burns and Fame.

It is amusing to learn that Burns when just emerging from obscurity jocularly anticipated that his birthday would come to be noted among other remarkable events. In a letter to his early patron, Gavin Hamilton, in 1786 he says, "For my own affairs I am in a fair way of becoming as eminent as Thomas a Kempis or John Bunyan, and you may henceforth expect to see my birthday inscribed among the wonderful events in the Poor Robin and Aberdeen Almanacs along with the Black Monday and the battle of Bothwell Bridge."

The Real Issue.

Stern Parent—Well, young man, I know nothing against you, but I'm not very well acquainted with you. Before you marry my daughter I'd like to have something in the nature of references or—Suttor—I can give references from three clergymen, sir. Parent—That's all very well, but can you give references from many bankers?

To the Point.

Dr. Gruff—Your husband, madam, needs rest.
"I know that, doctor; but he won't listen to me."
Dr. Gruff—If you would make it unnecessary for him to listen to you, madam, I think that will be rest enough.

Almost Human.

Lady—Can that parrot talk? Dealer—Talk? Why, say, lady, you'd think he was brought up in a box at de opory.—Puck.

The Window Habit.

In nearly every home in New York that has windows fronting on those avenues traversed by elevated trains there are one or more particular cushions known as the "elevated cushions." As their name implies, they are cushions on which the members of the family rest their elbows when leaning out of the window to look at either the passing elevated trains or what is going on in the street below. This looking out of the window habit is particularly a New York one, one that is noticed immediately by those coming here from out of town. Residents of other cities look out of their windows if there is anything in particular going on, but here women and children by day and men, women and children by night may be said fairly to live with their heads projecting from the windows. This habit is not prompted by any particular curiosity; it is simply born of the desire to be in touch with what is going on, though one may be a hundred feet above it.

Do Not Limit Your Ability.

Poverty and failure are self invited. The disaster people dread often comes to them. Worry and anxiety enfeeble their force of mind and so blunt their creative and productive faculties that they are unable to exercise them properly. Fear of failure or lack of faith in one's ability is one of the most potent causes of failure. Many people of splendid powers have attained only mediocre success, and some are total failures, because they set bounds to their achievement, beyond which they did not allow themselves to think that they could pass. They put limitations to their ability; they cast stumbling blocks in their way by aiming only at mediocrity or predicting failure for themselves, talking their wares down instead of up, disparaging their business and belittling their powers.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

Nations, like individuals, live and die, but civilization cannot perish. Hunger is one of the things that come to the individual who waits.

Origin of the Honeymoon.

The honeymoon used to last a month. The accepted notion, according to Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable, is that it must be spent away from home in order that the happy pair may get thoroughly acquainted without being victims of the curiosity of relatives and friends. It is so called from the habit of the ancient Germans of drinking "hydromel," which is a mixture of honey and water, for thirty days after marriage. Hydromel, fermented, contains enough alcohol to make a man intoxicated in short order, so that the honeymoon really was a debauch. Attila, the Hun, indulged so freely at his wedding that he died.

Curious Navy Order.

One of the most curious orders given in the royal navy is "All hands black faces," a supply of pigment for the purpose being carried by each ship. When a night surprise is expected it is not only the vessels that are made as little visible as possible. Even the faces of the men must be blackened, for when powerful night glasses are used the showing of a white face is far more palpable than any landman would suppose.—London Telegraph.

Qualified.

"Poor Mrs. De Olde! Her eyesight is failing so fast she is of very little use in society."
"Oh, she is in great demand."
"What for?"
"All the girls want her as chaperon."

The Sensible Thing.

Jones—Now, if you were in my shoes what do you think you would do in the matter? Brown (examining them)—Well, I certainly think I should get another pair.
