ANOTHER LEGISLATURE

The exposure of the municipal frauds in St. Louis, and the punishment of the grafters and thieves, has directed the attention of the people to the condition of state affairs. The Globe-Democrat finds that the Government of Missouri is very much like the Government of Ontario. It says: Democratic Government in Missouri, as now conducted, is so tainted with systematic bribery that it may be assumed that the people of the state will have a message for the ringsters at the next election. The chief plea of the ring is that Republicans are not better than the Democratic machine. A corrupt majority thus seeks to be continued in power on the strength of an assertion that the minority also is corrupt. There has been no Republican administration in Missouri for thirty years, and views of what one would do are conjectural. Most of the states in the union have Republican governors and legislatures, and they are not involved in boodling scandals, nor shouldering their failures, whatever they may be, upon the minority. Under our form of Government, majorities are given full power and must bear full responsibility. If they go into boodling they are unfaithful. If their legislation is both-work, they are incompetent. A small or broken-down majority in suits free government itself when it asks to be retained on the ground that the people are unable to improve matters by a change. For thirty years the Democratic party has had complete control of every department of the state government, except in the year 1895, when the house was Republican. Does the Democratic party of Missouri, or, rather, the ring that has usurped its functions, disown the accountability that goes with a majority? Such seems to be the position taken. The discredited majority in Missouri pleads that the minority is discredited because the corruption of the majority seduced some of the minority also. The minority could not govern the state if it would; the majority governs it, and in a way that is infamously shameful and a disgrace in the eyes of the nation. When a party goes down in the mire of corruption, the practical course for the people is to turn to the other party for relief, and the other party cannot be prejudged. Give it a majority, and hold it responsible for its acts."

ON LEARNING TO THINK.

Saturday Review.

The habit of giving the attention by even painful effort is of far more importance in education than any amount of cramming with bits of information. But that again is contrary to the cult of childhood. The great aim nowadays is to conceal the fact that attention is needed, that all things require effort in the learning. It is, of course, extremely delightful to see a band of happy youngsters beguiled by split straws and colored tissue papers into unconscious education, knitting the map of South Africa, with beads for battlefields, and splitting straws according to the first principles of political economy. But, viewed in reference to the time when kindergarten shall be no more and the child has to face its own manhood or womanhood, what is all this education worth in comparison with the single habit of giving attention by an effort of will, and not by the bribe of a pleasurable personal interest in the lesson to be learned? And herein lies the gist of the whole question as to whether childhood is to be treated with reference to its future development into manhood or womanhood.

After being kept there several days he was released, small-pox not having developed. Some days after Green took the disease and alleges he was shut up in a small office and kept there without nurses or proper food.
