NEWS OF NORFOLK

County Roused By Political Situation; Sentiment Against Election

CROPS LOOKING GOOD

MILITARY CROSS WON

Dr. Harold Buck of C. A. M. C. Wins Promotion and Honor

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
Simcoe, July 19.—The news from Ottawa was received here yesterday with semi-indifference mingled with disgust. The attitude throughout the county—which has given in men more than the agricultural interest could well spare, and has since lost many of the munition factories; which have locally contributed liberally to war funds and as county generally to war funds and as county has already voted $150,000 to the cause—is this: that the prosecution of government policy to aid in men, money, munition, and food, is paramount. There is hardly a man in the county who would hazard his future among his neighbors by protesting at an election at the present time is in the best interests of the men who have gone to France, and if an election comes, and Norfolk is requested to choose between British-Canadian aid led by R. L. Borden, in Empire's cause, and French-Canadian inaction led by Laurier in bilingual extension's cause, Norfolk will speak with emphasis.

It is locally regretted that since the war broke out, Norfolk's representative in the federal house has appeared nowhere in the county to hearten or encourage recruiting or any other war effort. Perhaps he thought his assistance has failed; but Mr. Charlton has failed to record his vote one way or the other on a question upon which the voice of Norfolk should have been

Smash Number One.
The first automobile collision to occur in town was staged yesterday afternoon on South Norfolk street when Miss Muriel Morden crossed south and on the right side of the road with some girl friends in her Ford, was smashed into by the Creasey of Port Ryerse going north. There was a delivery wagon in the way in Mr. Creasey's right of way and it is claimed that he crossed the middle of the street and collided with Miss Morden, who tried to get even closer to the gutter. Both cars were injured about the front, running gear and left fenders. No one was hurt. Delighted.

Mr. McCready was in town for a while yesterday evening enroute to Port Rowan and St. Williams in the interest of furthering the Production Campaign. He was delighted to hear of the sweeping way in which the Port Dovey committee entered the work last week, and said he got a good impression of the possibilities down there. Mr. McCready thinks that a county conference should be held later to thoroughly organize for next year's effort.

Crops Look Well About Port Rowan.
Mr. W. S. Franklin, of South Walsingham, was in town yesterday afternoon. He had cheerful news as to the condition of the crops on the heavy land in the Port Rowan district. The hay crop is now quite promising, much more so than in early June, and will yield well. Cereals, except where the water lay, have come on well, even the barley, though late, is making a good showing.

Townsend Pioneer Passes.
Frederick Kitchen, respected resident of Townsend, in the "sand hill" district, near Tyrrell, died yesterday morning, aged 79 years and two months. He was a son of the late Philip Kitchen, his mother's maiden name was Esther Heath. In earlier life he apprenticed as a wagon and carriage builder, with the late Hugh A. Culver, and for many years followed this craft. More recently he husbanded a small fruit farm. He married early in life, a daughter of the late John Donnelly, and their three children all preceded him. The partner of his long wedded life and his sister, remain.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at Mt. Zion cemetery.

OLD GIRLS CONFERENCE PICNIC HELD

Enjoyable Afternoon Spent in Sports at Mohawk Park

The Older Girls' Conference picnic at Mohawk Park yesterday afternoon was all that any of the girls' could wish for. The fine afternoon called so loudly to the girls that there were nearly 500 present. While the girls were gathering games were played and the girls enjoyed the privileges of the park.

A big feature of the afternoon was the soft ball game by two teams of the girls under the leadership of E. Sutch and E. Edwards. Dr. Amos kindly acted as Umpire and did it only Dr. Amos can. The score at the end of the game was 20-27 in favor of Miss Edwards' team. Races were next run off, they being a 100 yard dash, a backward race, a hopping race and ball throwing race.

The girls were divided according to ages into the following groups: 14 years, 15 years, 16 years, 17-19 years, 20-25 years and each group took part in the event. Four prizes were distributed. The money to buy the prizes was donated by the following Sunday School Superintendents, and their committees: Mr. W. G. Ranton, Mr. J. Brewster, Mr. E. Cooper, Mr. E. A. Danby, Dr. H. M. Stanley, Mr. A. E. Day, Dr. Verily, Mr. C. F. House, Mr. C. F. J. T. Grantham.

Following the races the girls made up the supper table. Owing to the unexpected grand champion some of the girls were put to slight inconveniences at first but in the end things adjusted themselves. They are sure that the afternoon will be one of the long remembrance events of the girls' first conference year. Much credit is due to the convenors and their committees in charge of the different features for the success of the afternoon.

Too Much Food in Summer means clogged liver and sluggish brain; too little food means flabby muscles and starved nerves. The man on the job must keep his brain clear and his muscles responsive. The way to do this is to eat Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the food that contains everything in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form, including the outer bran coat which is so useful in keeping the alimentary canal clean and healthy. Two or three of these crisp, little brown loaves of whole wheat with milk make a nourishing, strengthening meal. Ready-cooked and ready-to-serve.

SCATTERED FRIENDS

(By J. Ormsby Johnson.)
My memory goes back to the days before the war, I am sitting at a table in the street of a town on a warm night of June. There is a coolness going down the street and against the pale summer sky, you can see the clear shape of the old buildings and a gay room and the sound of music. There is a great content of pleasure of life in the scene. Life is secure and full and prosperous in that town, with its buildings of the past and its busy employment of the present—a town both tranquil and well occupied.

At the table there are sitting with me my friend the Belgian merchant, his English wife, his son, who if he were allowed, would go into the British navy, and his two daughters, who are not French, but have a touch of the French grace. The children speak several languages and the old man speaks English as well as his own. I was as one of the family. I knew all the little jokes that never grow stale in a family, and I spent long tranquil days with them, in their old house and on board their yacht which never again will lie snug with its old-fashioned rig in the shadow of the clock tower. Indeed I was so much of the family that sometimes I made one of the parental party that used to go up to the old gabled room where the children slept, to bid them good-night. On moonlit nights when you looked from that window you could see across the fields the glint of the rain in the distance. It was used to make romances about it. It was used to hope that they had been over the water to go. It went all the way through those years before the war, I think of him now as living through those years before the war, like the man in the bay window of Dickens's tale who heard the footfall on the street, waxing and waning as the unknown came nearer and then faded away in the night, and who knew what the owner meant, yet was powerless to ward off the impending evil.

At last the evil came and they could only fly before it, leaving everything that they had, taking with them only the memory of the happiness that life had once held. I have seen these scattered members of that once happy family. They are all separated now. The father works in an English office, the wife is ill; she will never be well again, the son is a private in the Belgian Army, the daughters work, one in a Flander's Hospital, the other in a factory in England. The war has scattered them, and they must work on, with what hope they may, with the knowledge that life as it once was has been cut off, never to be renewed.

No human mind can conceive the collected sorrow of a nation that has suddenly been swept away. It can only be realized in little, in such simple stories as this of that Flemish family I knew. And even then those who live far away in such sheltered places as the old west country, where hardly a sight or sound of war has come, which still looks as it looked before the war, and will be still the same when the war is done, find it hard to realize the awful tragedy that war can be, even without the pain of death. But when you have realized it, when you realize that nothing now matters to win this stupendous battle between darkness and light, between "spiritual wickedness in high places" and old-fashioned decency, honor and liberty, and you know too, that whether such and such peoples among the allied nations are ruled by Kings or Presidents, it matters so long as they have those things for which we fight, in their hearts.
