A BREEZE FROM LANSDOWNE.

Messrs John T. Warren, E. Clair, Samuel H. Warren, Thomas Stephens, Frederick J. Warren, and Lord W. Polley have returned from the season's thrashing, each of the above-named Warren boys, with their engines and equipments, to the fine old Warren homestead.

Mr. John T. Warren and Nelson H. Warren are running three teams full ploughing, and require three more to do all the work. Mr. John Warren's sons are also running three teams full ploughing. This gentleman also runs about a 40-horse team, doing about $1000 a year from the same.

Mr. Benjamin Warren has moved into his new house, a fine, commodious one it is, in good taste. Population of Lansdowne is gradually increasing.

WOMAN'S HEAVY LOAD.

SOL JONES SAYS EMPHATICALLY THAT SHE IS WRONGED.

He Philosophizes on the Grievous Burden of the Fair Sex, and Wants to Know Why Men Always Escape While Their Weaker Victims Suffer.

Ellas Town's daughter Mag came back last week. She married and went away from here five years ago coming Christmas, and here she is just in good time for another year of nothin' as I can see to be glad for.

"Lias was comfable, and took good care of his family. Mag had as good a home as any girl in the county. The next year she and her husband had a girl to get her, but she wouldn't have none of them. And when a fellow come along from another county she wouldn't have none of them. She didn't know nothin' about him, and she said she didn't care to know. He suited her and if he didn't suit her she'd get down on her hands and knees and beg for him. He suited her and if he didn't suit her she'd get down on her hands and knees and beg for him.

Of course she married him and then she went out to the plains, and Lias set them up in farmin' but Mag's man didn't work on a farm, and she wrote back his health wasn't strong enough to plough, so they sold the things and went into a store in the town. They got their man in the town, and his husband's partner had cheated him out of everything and run away with the money, and there was that.

Mr. John Warren took two prizes on ladies' fine art work; R. A. Folley first on combing of hair, and second on hairdressing. Mr. Gilbert Swind—first on honey exhibit. His wild miel is one of the finest in the country—a 12-oz wheel, one of the latest Chicago designs. It keeps a 30-barrel tank in the loft full of water and runs a circular wheel as well. He has ground about 400 bushels of provender, besides his own grain, all of fine quality, will run a straw or ensilage cutter or a tread mill, and he has a fine windmill. The reports from county supt. of work was taken up. Mrs. Gillis gave excellent accounts of work done at the fair by their union. Unfermented wine was reported on by Mrs. Arnold. She had written to visited all ministers in the six places where unions are in the county and found out that 16 churches were using unfermented wine and 8 fermented wine at the communion. Juvenile work was reported on by Mrs. Nash. Lynn and Delta both had good bands of hope, Gannanoke and Athens were organizing bands. An interesting report was read from Mrs. Davies of Gannanoke on work among sailors and soldiers. A temperance feast was conducted by Mrs. Wilton and the meeting closed with noon-tide prayer.

A SPORTING PARADISE.

A PICTUREQUE REGION OF THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

The North Shore of New Brunswick—A Glimpse at the Prosperous Outing of St. John—Notes of a September Outing in a Delightful Country.

Every city and hamlet in Ontario has its particular north shore, but the one spoken of in this article is the north shore of New Brunswick, and it is washed by the waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, with its gigantic bays and inlets. There are no speckled trout to be caught from the rocks, though there are millions of them far up the rivers and streams which flow into the gulf; but the salmon, that king of fish, abounds, as do mackerels, haddock and an almost infinite variety of food fishes, including in its season the princely—and bony—cod. The oyster, too, is a delicacy of the coast, and the fishery is one of the most important in the native beds around Prince Edward Island, Point du Chene and the vicinity. It is a pity, therefore, to be an explorer, I give them my modest but sincere approval. To taste them for the first time is to experience wholly new sensations in eating, and if one does not feel as though he had never before tasted a Saddle Rock, as if he had "swallowed a small baby"—the north shore oyster is not large—certainly does emulate the great ones of the west.

The north shore of New Brunswick seems at first blush a great way off from Ontario cities and towns, but railways in the west have almost annihilated the distance. One steps on board a palace car on the Canadian Pacific Railway in Windsor, say, and in thirty-six hours by the watch steps one is at St. John, the metropolis of the province of New Brunswick. It is a trip that is well worth one's while even if one has no interest in the objective point. The scenery, though less rugged and startling than that on the western portion of the Canadian Pacific—was varied and pleasing. After leaving Montreal, where the St. Lawrence is crossed on a splendid span of the cantilever bridge, the road runs to the southeast and presents the traveler with a panorama which includes the Green Mountains of Vermont, the White Hills of New Hampshire and what is left of the once magnificent plinths of Maine. There are glimpses, too, of Katahdin and Moosehead Lake, and the charming of inland waters; and after the frontier is again crossed the woods of the St. John and the Kennebec furnish pictures which will linger long in memory's gallery.

St. John is rather a solemn city and conveys the impression rather of staid respectability and solidity than of thrift and enterprise. It has suffered like all the rest of us from the hard times, and has had the additional burden of trying to recover from the fire which devastated it in 1877. It exhibits, however, less appearance of poverty or illness than any city with which I am acquainted of 45,000 inhabitants, and it has the proud record of having no "poor fund" or any beneficiaries for one. It is a slightly city "set upon a hill," and was settled by the loyalists who left New York in 1783.

Attractive features of the provincial city are the high tides, the water rising and falling in the spring and autumn from thirty to thirty-five feet. This tremendous change in the harbor level, has a remarkable effect upon the outlook from the River St. John, which takes its rise in Maine, and after flowing 450 miles through that state and the province of New Brunswick empties into the harbor through a rocky channel not much more than 900 feet in width. At low tide there is a fall of this point of some fifteen feet; and at high tide the water is raised to such a level that it flows into the river with resistless force. At half-tide the fall can be passed with safety by the way navigator; but if the latter fails to be on his guard, he may find himself or his cargo on the rocks, or on the cantilever just above—and the note the "daily recurring miracle," as the people call it, of water running up hill.

THE JAP'S ILLUSTRATION.

A bright young native of Japan, who is in business in this city, came into the Express office the other evening to learn the latest news about the war between England and China. He speaks English with but a slight accent, and his only difficulty in expressing himself seems to be rather in a limited vocabulary than in inability to pronounce the words. He has the utmost confidence in Japan's ultimate victory, and when it was remarked to him that China had a great advantage in point of numbers, he replied: "It's just like this. You have one hundred cents—that's one dollar. I have one dollar-bill. That's only one cent."

MOOSE HUNTING.

Striking at His Rights.

Hunry Higgins—I met a Anarchist last night. Had a long talk with 'im. "Why, Higgins—was he any good?" "Hunry Higgins—I should say not. He wants to do away with 'us' fellows entirely. Anyhow, he was gittin' off his high, he was talkin' about 'blitterin' the kiste-class."

Never Unemployed.

"In what business is the lady in the next room engaged?" "Landlady!—In every one's."

When a man's Mother's.

Abroad, and especially in France, when a military or naval officer is associated with some prominent name. Dumas set the fashion sixty years ago by calling a little white mouse the "Princess Louise," "Stonie Crisite." It kept its name all through the author's life and retained it until a year ago, when it passed from the family register into the hands of a little old fellow at Merville-sur-Mer, which he and his neighbors call the "Villa des Cloches." The neighbors are 15 feet, very proud of it, and they have a little cottage where he has just presented the villa with a pair of bells for a jubilee. So that the name of the "Princess Louise" may be found in the name of the cottage. The popularity of the footlights.—London Daily News.

Fride of Auld Scotia.

It is said that the Duke of Argyll, when his son, the Marquis of Lorne, was betrothed to the Princess Louise, said to the Minister's wife, Mrs. Donald Fraser: "This is one of those Scotch girls which will be the burden of rank." A feeling which was shared by his retainers, one of whom, after hiding a huge drink of whisky to the young couple's health, remarked: "This 'ill be a proud day for Her Majesty."

The "Grapple" Plant.

The "grapple" plant, a botanical oddity which grows only along the edge of the sea, has the general resemblance of an immense star fish. Each ray or arm of this vegetable curiosity is provided with natural "grapple-hooks," and if a sheep get too near it is likely to be caught by the wool and held till it dies.

Flax Growing for Seed.

The experiments of flax growing for seed and fiber in the South Atlantic has been eminently satisfactory, far exceeding expectations. It is expected that a much larger area will be devoted to flax culture, and possibly other fiber plants.

His Trying Hello.

First Theoplian—Hello, acting? Second Theoplian—Yes. First Theoplian—Where? Second Theoplian—Everywhere—act inough of the capy? First Theoplian—Were flush when I'm laid?

Inside Facts.

Mrs. Willowsan (calling on Mrs. Wadsworth): Your mother has a lot of new hats, but she says she won't wear 'em. Will: Yes; and the man comes here every week to collect the bill.
