LUMBERERS, ATTENTION!

I AM SOLE AGENT FOR THE

WOODBRIDGE SAW MILL,
which with the late improvements, stands unrivalled.

This Machine requires no expensive puttings, as it has by its own merits become the leading Saw Mill of Canada.

It is so geared that the Saw makes two revolutions to one stroke of the piston, thus avoiding the shaking caused by direct action.

The Sailor Boy's Farewell.

Farewell to father—blessed hulk
In spite of metal, spite of bulk,
His cable soon may slip;
Yet while the parting tear is moist
The flag of gratitude I'll hoist
In duty to the ship.

Farewell to mother—lovely yacht
Who launched me on life's stormy sea
And rigged me fore and aft;
May providence her timbers spare
And keep her hulk in good repair,
To tow the smaller craft.

Farewell to sister—lovely yacht
But whether she'll be manned or not
I cannot now foresee;
May some good ship a tender prove,
Well found in stores—truth and love,
And take her under lee.

Farewell to George—the jolly boat,
And all the little crafts about
In home's delightful bay;
When they arrive at sailing age,
May wisdom prove the weather gauge,
And guide them on their way.

Farewell to all on life's rude main,
And though we never may meet again
Through stress of stormy weather;
Yet summoned by the board of love
We'll anchor in the port above,
And all be moored together.

"SHIP AHOY!"

A Story in thirty-six Cable Lengths.

'But it will not last,' continued the old woman, fiercely, in her denunciation, and seeming, as she stood there, like some prophetic of old—'it will not last! The Lord shall hear the cries of the widow, the fatherless, the bereft; and a day of vengeance shall arrive for such as you.'

She stopped, and turned to May, and laid a trembling hand upon her fair head.

'Be very pitiful to me, my child. God bless you! You know it, then? she cried, as she saw the crane bow.

And now her voice was weak and feeble, as she clung to the trembling girl. 'Yes,' she said, gently, 'be very pitiful to me, and think of me in your prayers. Ah, my child, he loved you with all a strong man's love; my son, my dear first-born, whom I worshipped so that God has taken him away as a punishment for my vain idolatry. But he loved you, my child; and, if I see you no more, think of me gently; for, though once I felt hard and cruel, and jealous of you, I could have loved you dearly, with all a mother's love. And now—now he is gone! He died for you—for your sake, in his despair!'

'Come,' she added, after a few moments, and she laid her hand upon the younger woman—'Come, Mrs. Gurnett, let us go; we have no place here. Mr. Halley, she said, with a sweet, calm dignity, 'forgive me this. If it had been your ship that had been lost, with my poor boy on board, I could have come and wept pitifully at your feet, and asked for comfort; but as for these men—'

She said no more; but, holding Mrs. Gurnett's hand, and looking fixedly at Longdale, led her to the door, where she was followed by May and Mr. Halley to the cab that was in waiting.

Then, without comment, Mr. Halley led May, weeping bitterly and quite unminding, to her room.

When he returned to the dining-room, it was empty.

'Where is Mr. Merritt? Has Mr. Longdale gone?'

'They said, sir, as they thought they would not stop, but would see you to-morrow,' said Samuel.

'Thank God!' muttered Mr. Halley, throwing himself into a chair, while the partners were walking slowly; back toward town, heedless of the rain that was falling heavily, and that they were in evening dress.

'I've had enough of this,' said Merritt, at last.

'Don't be a fool! was the abrupt reply. 'I'll drop it at once. That old woman made my blood run cold. It is worse than D. T. Another such scene as that, and I shall lose May Halley.'

'Nonsense!' said Longdale abruptly.

'Nonsense! I tell you I couldn't stand it; but I'll have no more of it. No more of what?' said Longdale in a fierce tone that made his companion start, and stand listening beneath the wall of an old house.
