CHOOSING A HORSE.

3, 4, 6, 15, 29, 31, 36, 39

Now I know perfectly well that I can tell you nothing about choosing a horse. If you are a New Englander you will know all about the trade; if you are a New Yorker, you could give me points on every horse in the ring; if you are middle west, you probably have raced or worked or traded or raised more horses than I will ever ride. But in selecting a mountain horse, his mere points as a physical specimen are often little in his favor, while glaring defects may concern his usefulness hardly at all.

Never mind, at first, how the horses offered for our inspection looks. Examine him for blemishes later. You must first discover if he is sure-footed and courageous. An eastern horse would not last five minutes on a western trail. A western horse, no matter how accustomed to mountain work, is worse than useless if subject ordinary horse-panies at suddenly rustling leaves, unexpected black skubs, and the elike. He must attend to his footing, keep his eyes for the trail, and be wise. Next you must inquire if this steadiness carries over into other things. He must stand when left without hitching, and must be easy to catch. Often you will have to dismount for the purpose of clearing trail, helping the pack train, tightening ropes, or reconnoitring. At such junctures iron hitching posts are not always at hand. Nothing is more aggravating than the precessity of searching experywhere for a Never mind, at first, how the horses hitching posts are not always at hand. Nóthing is more aggravating than the necessity of searching everywhere for a place to tie; or worse, to be forced to chase down and coax quiet a horse that has promptly decamped when left for a moment to himself. Nor does it add to your joy to get up at four for the purpose of making an early start, only to spend the extra hour filehed from sleep in an attempt to catch some snorting fool horse.—From 'Horse, Mule or Burro for the Trail," by Stewart Edward White, in the Outing Magazine for October.

REFUSED OFFER.

Winnipeg real estate man named Pritchar, representing an English and Canadian syndicate, interviewed Premier Whitney and Hon. The Government refused to consider the offer, although the price is double that paid by settlers, on the ground that it was unwise to sell large blocks, which might be held for speculation.

The surrounding towns were damaged to a considerable extent, and the funicular railway was paralyzed. Ten persons were injured, according to reports received.

Still Alive in the Ruins,

New York, Oct. 27.—The Sun has re-ceived the following cable despatch from Rome: Exact particulars as to the extent of the carthouake damage and the correct number of victims are as yet unavailable. Nothwithstanding the efforts of the Government to help the sufferers and the work of the soldiers, the effects of the earthquake are bound to last for many yearz. Calabrians are ignorant of self-help. They are illiterate and fatalists. Loss of energy and action invariably follows any calamity.
