The schooner Frank H. Adams, arrived in port today from Carboner to go on dock.

At Carboner on Thursday next, the members of the choir of the Methodist Church are rendering the Sacred Cantata, "The King of Glory," in the Church. A regular treat in the musical line is anticipated by those who hope to be present.

Easter will soon be with us. The last couple of days being such exceptionally fine ones, we are prepared to believe that Spring is opening, and that the garb of winter will soon be entirely removed.

We are looking forward with an expectancy of seeing something good when the three act comedy "Oh Susannah" which is now being rehearsed, is put before the public. The cast of this play comprises the very best talent that can be produced here; the stage and fittings are in the hands of our capable local artist, Mr. James Power, familiarly known as "Jimmy," and the affair is under the guidance of Mrs. W. T. Bellamy—one who has the success of the play at heart for the proceeds are in aid of the National War Memorial. Every effort is being made to put on an excellent performance, so as to please the people of St. John's, but more especially to raise no meagre sum to hand over to the worthy cause.

Here is a medium through which we may all contribute to Nid's Memorial to her gallant sons. Through this Memorial will be placed in St. John's, we are ever mindful that it also represents and honors the boys from our own town (as well as those from all other places in our Island home) who played their part in the struggle for Right and Justice. Therefore, let us push the thing along, in order that the contribution may be a large one, and therefore show, even in this manner, that St. John's is doing her bit to keep ever great the Memory of those who won for themselves the name of being "Better than the Best"—COR. Harbor Grace Notes.

S. S. Seal, Captain J. Kean, arrived in port 1.40 p.m. yesterday, (Sunday) hauling for 4,500 seals. At the present moment of writing we are not aware whether she will make a second trip to the icefields or not.

Several stowaways are reported to have been on the Seal, one of whom being a lad named Johnnie Gladney, well known in town, having lived her some years ago.

L. M. Joy went out on Thursday morning's train for St. John's to take passage by the S. S. Rosalind enroute to New York.

Scotland fade away from sight. When two days at sea they saw two warships with all sails spread in the pursuit of them, and rapidly overhauling their smaller craft. But good fortune smiled upon them for once. A dense fog fell on the sea, and when it lifted the warships were not to be seen. Thus at last Prince and Chieftain had the soil of France under their feet, and their days of peril were over.

When Knights Were Bold.

Mr. James Welsh—popularly known as "Jimmy," who was born in 1865 and died on Wednesday, April 12, 1917, first appeared on the stage with William Barrett and remained with him for two years. He was one of the first English actors to appear in a Bernard Shaw play, for he took the part of Lickchese in "Widower's Houses" at the Royalty, London, in December, 1892. Mr. Welsh played a large number of other parts in all kinds of plays until he made himself a permanent favorite by producing at Nottingham in May 1906, that screaming farce "When Knights were Bold." He played Sir Guy de Vere and brought the piece to the Criterion, London, where it ran from January 1907 to July 1908. Then he took it on tour and played it for nearly three years with hardly a break. He was selected in 1904 to fill Dan Leno's place in Drury Lane pantomime and appeared as Prince Patter in the next piece. Like many other men, Mr. Welsh was not successful in everything he undertook. It is related that when playing golf in Scotland he had a tactful old Scotchman as caddy, who followed him round for some time in silence, watching his play; then he broke in with "are you doing pretty well with the acting, Mr. Welsh?" "Yes," said Mr. Welsh. "I think so." "Well," was the further remark, "I think 'e'd better stick to it instead o' taking up golf."

Rumor Picks Princess Mary's Bridesmaid

AS FAVORITE WITH PRINCE OF WALES.

Will Rachel Cavendish be next Queen of England? Persons close to the royal house say that when the Prince of Wales returns from his trip to India their engagement will be announced.

Lady Rachel Cavendish, one of the prettiest girls of English nobility, was one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Princess Mary. The two are intimate friends. Lady Rachel is 19 and she and the heir to the throne have been in each other's company a great deal. Her father used to be Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, and when the Prince reached Canada on his way to the United States he enjoyed an informal holiday with Lady Rachel and her four sisters. Later he returned to Ottawa for another visit. It was then that the royal romance started, a romance that may be a far-reaching effect upon the world. The choosing of a wife is not a personal task or pleasure for a prince. The House of Lords is interested and discusses the match solemnly. The premier may be satisfied. The people wish their King to have a fine wife.

The Prince of Wales will be less susceptible to steering than most princes. He has a will and a way of his own. Those who know him say he brings back memories of his grandfather, King Edward VII. The prince owns a ranch in Canada, and it is possible he may spend his honeymoon there, far from formality and court etiquette.

Thus it stands, awaiting the return of the prince, who, by the way, is known officially as: Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, Prince of Wales, Heir Apparent, Earl of Chester, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, Grand Steward or Seneschal of Scotland, Duke of Saxony and Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, etc.—Herald.

A Stuart Champion.

The house of Stuart never had champions more ready to sacrifice fortune, and even life itself, in its cause, than the Camerons of Lochiel. One of its Chieftains carried his loyalty to the extent of turning his back on Scotland to share his master's exile. But he left behind him a champion in his son Donald. Even the disaster of Dunkirk, and the low ebb of the Stuart cause, never quenched his zeal. When Charles landed in Scotland on April 12, 1745, with but a handful of followers, to fight a hopeless cause, Donald was ready with his aid, and a few days later the Lochiel was riding proudly at the head of seven hundred of his clansmen, to join his Prince in the Valley of Glenhann, with one of his kinswomen, Jenny Cameron, by his side, arrayed in all the immortal splendours of a "sea green riding habit laced with gold." Soon the Jacobite army was following, and thus began the ill-fated march which was to end in the crushing defeat at Culloden, which shattered for ever, the Stuart hopes, and sent Charles Edward in his five month's hiding, with £20,000 on his head. Thenceforward there was no rest for Charles and Donald. The latter was severely wounded several times, but persistently accompanied his Royal Master in his hideous in caves and woods. From one point to another they went, ever with the bloodhounds on their track, and it was not until September that they heard that two French vessels had put in at Loch Narburgh. Here was a chance to escape, and tramping through the night, they at last reached the coast. Other Jacobites joined them on the way, and, safe on board they watched

St. John's Resident Had Suffered Four Years Of Torture From Stomach Troubles—Health Now Perfect.

"After my experience with Tanlac I want to join with those who are praising it to the skies," said Mrs. E. Clayton, Walsh's Square, St. John's, Nfld. "Nobody knows how I suffered for the last four years with indigestion and dyspepsia. The agony at times was almost more than I could bear and I got to where I even dreaded for meal time to come round. "I lost weight and strength right along and became so nervous that there were times when I was afraid to be left alone even for a few minutes. "My health is perfect now, however, and I haven't a vestige of my old trouble. Tanlac to my mind, is the best and grandest medicine in the world." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

"Because of it all," I corrected.

An Approach to Real Happiness. And as I journeyed home that day I fell to wondering if there is anywhere a nearer approach to real happiness than on a street like that where hard work gives people the discipline they need to keep them from getting soft, where babies give them a reason for living, where there is money enough to pay the bills, to save and to have some of the simpler pleasures such as the flivver is the symbol of. I wonder if the people who live on such streets know how happy they are. Most of us don't, alas. To quote from a contemporary of mine whose work I greatly admire: "When I get rich the children dream. With eyes on some far day And when they're old, with eyes turned back: "When I was rich they say."

Booming Nova Scotia's Fisheries.

LARGER FLEET THAN EVER. Halifax, N. S. April.—(By Canadian Press.)—Nova Scotia will have a larger number of deep sea fishing vessels engaged in the spring fishing this year than in any spring since the war, and leaders in the fishing industry anticipate a season a great activity. The fishing business was one of the first to go to pieces, when the cycle of business depression set in, but it is now well on the road to recovery, and the activity everywhere manifest in this industry is giving an impetus to all kinds of business throughout the province. Scores of schooners have already sailed for the fishing banks and others are being fitted out at as fast as possible. The well known racer Blue-nose was one of the first to sail. To the spring fishing Lunenburg, which for some years past has had numbers of grand bankers lying idle, will send out practically every vessel of its big fleet, which is not away on a trading voyage. And whether or not the spring trip is a success, the indications are that every vessel suitable for the fishing will be pressed into service for the summer trip to the Grand Banks. Much ice has been reported on some of the fishing banks this spring, but in spite of that the fishing skippers have been eager to make an early start.

FLIVVERS AND BABIES.

Your article about flivvers amused us because of the last two months, we have been the happy possessors of one, are loving it, almost, and have in this short time more fun than ever had with anything, except baby.

Not "Class" But Happiness. The last time I went up that street on my last visit home I saw four flivvers standing out in front of various houses. My host who came to meet me commented on the fact. "And there's two more that don't happen to be out in front to-day" he said, "and some of the rest of us have hopes of a flivver in a year or two. Not much class to this street, you see." And then his wife who had followed him out to greet me added, "Flivvers and babies. They seem to go together somehow."

Whereupon her husband flung an arm over her shoulder and finished "Flivvers and babies and hard work and a lot of happiness in spite of it all."

Do You Know the Neighborhood? The neighborhood I mean is a typical street in the New England town I was brought up. It wouldn't be Main Street, but Oak or Elm or one of the shorter streets that run off Main Street and take their lead from the fact that they once had a preponderance of the tree name. Most of the houses are single ones, a few small new ones and a larger, shabbier older ones. Two of the three two-family houses on street are old-fashioned houses ever. And as it happens, most the occupants of these houses are

FISH PRICES INCREASING

According to prominent fish merchants here the fish markets are in a position to absorb a big catch this year. Very few dealers have stocks of any importance on their hands, and for the past few months prices have been increasing, though usually at this season of the year the tendency of prices is to decline. There does not appear to be any noticeable increase in the consumption of fish, as might be expected during the period of general business depression, though fish, was the first food stuff to drop to the low price level. The present favorable market conditions are attributed to the fact that last year the production was comparatively small, and available stocks are now smaller than at any time for years. A big catch this year will be necessary to meet the current market demands and provide the normal carry over the stocks. With the revival of the fish industry, the shipyards where wooden vessels are constructed are also showing signs of activity.
