The Ghost That Walked Through

A Wiarton Man Frostbitten in August— Crop Prospects in Oxford—A Lady Fatally Burned.

BRUCE.

Tara has lately rejoiced in the possession of a white robed ghost which was wont to waik at a midnight hour. The ghost had a queer penebant for visiting an unromantic slaughter house belonging to the Messrs. Dolphin, and after its visit the proprietors found that the meat stored therein had always suffered more or less diminution. Inquiry into the phenomenon resulted in the capture of the spirit, who proved to be a woman of the village wrapped in a white sheet, and on plunder bent.

Mr. Samuel Kirkland, Teeswater, died very suddenly last Friday night. A few minutes after getting into bed his wile heard a peculiar, heavy breathing, and before she could light a lamplife had fled. An incident occurred in Wiarton the other day of a very peculiar nature. Mr. Donald McLeod recently went to work for the Buffalo Fish Company, and was sent to the "freezer" with pans of fish, which are stored therein and frozen. The thermometer in the freezer is always twenty degrees below zero, and Donald neglected to put on a pair of mitts, which are especially provided for the men. He was only in the freezer some three minutes, but when he came out he soon realized that all the fingers on both hands were frezen stiff.
